HOOVER OPPOSES '31 TAX CUT
NYE CHARGES HUGE DAVIS FUND

Today

The Gains Tax.
Lady Astor's Party.
New Ideas, New Wealth.
Women Are Better.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE MOST IMPORTANT paragraph in President Hoover's extremely important message deals with the "capital gains tax." This tax, which the President condemns, causes many of our troubles. Hampering freedom of purchase and sale, it caused, largely, the gambling mania of a year ago by withdrawing stocks from the market, and, through scarcity, constantly increasing prices.

UNDER THE capital gains tax, if you buy and sell at profit, you must pay a tax on that profit.

On the other hand, if you buy and sell at a loss, you can deduct your loss from income tax.

WHILE PRICES were going up, men would not sell, and the government made no profit in the way of capital gains tax.

But after the slump, with prices going down, thousands sold, to get the benefit of income tax reduction, and this shows in Uncle Sam's diminished receipts.

OUR NEIGHBORS in Canada have no such unwise tax discouraging free buying and selling, and many Americans, ingeniously advised, when they want to sell at a profit, do their selling across the border, in Canada. At a loss, they sell here.

The capital gains tax is an unwise tax, hampering business, encouraging accumulation, based on fear of taxation on profits.

LADY ASTOR gives a party and invites only women, 36 of them, who, says she, are the 36 most important women in England.

And they are all workers in some field—scientists, doctors, government workers. No one would be called by our American reporters "a society woman" or anything approaching it.

IT WOULD be interesting to print the pictures of those 36 women selected by Lady Astor and contrast with their faces the 36 most important women, if they could be identified, in the New York City's "Four Hundred" selected by Ward McAllister long ago.

Which set of 36 faces do you think would show the most intelligence? Morrill Goddard should publish this comparison in his Scientific Weekly.

DR. MILLER REESE HUTCHISON has a new invention, and Hawks, our greatest air pilot at the moment, is experimenting with it. The importance of this invention, if Dr. Hutchison's hopes are realized, cannot be exaggerated.

IT WILL TAKE from the fumes of gasoline the deadly quality that poisons the air in great cities, causing occasional deaths in closed garages.

Even more important is the fact that this new gasoline is expected to increase the cruising range of an airplane by almost 100 per cent.

What men can imagine, they can do, and what they require, their brains can produce.

ANY WORKMAN fighting against improved methods, in machinery or anything else, fights against himself in the long run.

Similarly any individual that fights against a new idea also fights against himself.

In Britain's cotton industry, as in certain lines of work here, workers refuse to do as much, or even half as much, as they might do if they chose. They call this "helping the other man to get a job."

Mill owners in England offered increased pay to their workers, almost doubling wages, if the men would attend to eight looms instead of the usual four, which they could do quite well.

The men say "no." They want to do half as much as they can, so as to give twice as many men work.

That idea will keep them poor, and force in machines that will do more than men ever dreamed of doing.

To fight progress is folly.

GIVE WOMEN a chance, and they work. In the air they are doing more than men in proportion to opportunity.

Mrs. Keith-Miller, in spite of bad weather, undertakes a dangerous flight, has a narrow escape and tells about it quite cheerfully.

Miss Ruth Nichols, of Rye N. Y., flies from the Atlantic to the Pacific in 16 hours 59½ minutes, taking almost nine hours from the women's record.

Does she rest and talk about herself? No! She will start again and see how fast she can cross the continent in the other direction.

In women courage and a majority of the other good qualities are more highly developed than men.

Conceit, which is useful, because it encourages us, keeps men from knowing it.

TO SAY THAT Mr. Davis, former secretary of labor, can't take his seat in the Senate is preposterous. The Senate, itself, is the judge of its membership. The right of the people is to elect whom they please, to represent them.

The Senate acted wisely in giving Mr. Davis his seat.

IF, AS ALLEGED by Senator Nye, more than $500,000 was spent at the primaries to win the election for Mr. Davis, the facts, doubtless, will come out.

The people will want to know who was willing to spend more than half a million to send Mr Davis to the Senate. Doubtless, it will be found that the money was contributed by union labor.

FREE TOUR AWARDS MADE

Squirrel Hill Girl Wins Highest Honor; 5 Others Get Trips to Bermuda

There is at least one supremely happy girl in Pittsburgh today. She is Miss Anna Nydes, 5888 Darlington road, Squirrel Hill, who has been selected by the judges as the winner of the Gloria Swanson free de luxe tour to Paris, all expenses paid.

When the tellers had finished the tabulation of the votes yesterday, Miss Nydes led all others and consequently gets the trip that so many girls wanted. Miss Nydes polled 187,150 votes.

The following girls, who win free trips to Bermuda as guests of the Sun-Telegraph, trailed right along behind the leader:

Agnes Rita Carroll, 406 Airbrake avenue, Wilmerding, Pa.

Jean De Blasio, Arnold, Pa.

Marion Evans, 2917 Charles street, North Side, Pittsburgh.

Sarah Jane Shapiro, 2022 Wylie avenue, Pittsburgh.

Jean Eisenberg, 2324 Wylie avenue, Pittsburgh.

The winner of the Paris trip is 25 and the daughter of Mrs. Bessie Nydes and a sister of Dr. Phil C. Nydes. She was educated at the O'Hara and Ralston schools and put in two years of night study at the University of Pittsburgh. She is employed in the department of law, City of Pittsburgh.

Miss Nydes will sail for Paris on the Ile de France on December 12 and the Bermuda party will probably sail on the same day on the SS. Pan-America.

Campaign of Ex-Secretary And Brown Cost Over $600,000, Senator Says

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Chairman Nye, of the Senate Campaign Funds Committee, said today his committee had uncovered expenditures of $272,312 for the Davis-Brown primary ticket in Pennsylvania over the $368,962 reported to the committee last May.

Nye read the total of $641,274 expenditures in concluding a session of his committee to delve further into reports of discrepancies in the accounting of campaign funds spent for the ticket headed by Senator Davis and Francis Shunk Brown, gubernatorial candidate.

A total of $19,500, he said, represented funds reported by county campaign treasurers as having been received from the Davis-Brown committee headed by Samuel Vauclain, but for which no accounting had been made by the latter in reports either to the secretary of state for Pennsylvania or the Nye committee.

At the outset of today's session of the Senate, Senator Black, (Dem.), Alabama, read without comment the resolution adopted by the Senate in seating Senator Newberry, of Michigan, eight years ago with "severe condemnation" for the expenditures of $195,000 in his campaign.

George F. Weaver, of Philadelphia, who said he was in the "collection agency business," told of

Unemployment and Farm Aid Swell Total; President Sees Treasury Deficit

The Day in Washington

President Hoover, asking Congress for a budget of nearly $4,000,000,000, advised against continued tax reduction.

Senator Nye continues fight to unseat Senator James J. Davis and charges huge primary funds unreported.

House committee reported Treasury-Postoffice supply bill with recommendation of large increase in public building appropriations.

By M. L. RAMSAY,
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—President Hoover sent a $4,667,000,000 budget to Congress today, with an injunction to expand unemployment and drought relief despite the impending deficit, but to shun continued tax reduction.

He forecast a deficit for this fiscal year, ending June 30, of $180,076,000. This must be increased, he pointed out, to expand the relief measures. But the deficit, coming after a succession of thumping surpluses and retirement of the public debt $3,500,000,000 ahead of schedule, is not a matter of "great concern," Mr. Hoover said.

CITY LEADERS TO SEE PINCHOT

Pittsburgh political chiefs and lawmakers were to hold important conferences in Philadelphia today and tomorrow, one presumably having to do with leadership of the coming Legislature, the other involving modification of the Blue Laws.

Mayor Charles H. Kline, County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, who is also Republican county chairman, and State Senator James J. Coyne were en route to Philadelphia today at the summons of Gov.-elect Pinchot. Out of the conference probably will come an agreement on the speakership of the House, they indicated informally.

Tomorrow a committee headed by Councilman Harry A. Little and accompanied by Representative M. A. Musmanno, will confer with a similar committee of Philadelphia councilmen, as well as with civic leaders of that city, on steps

PUBLISHER DIES IN HOME FIRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Courtland H. Young, magazine publisher, was burned to death in his apartment in West Fifty-fifth street today. Firemen found the body.

The circumstances surrounding the finding of the body of the wealthy publisher puzzled police.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Young, former Dollies showgirl, is the divorced wife of the publisher.

The marital tribulations of the Youngs kept the divorce courts in New York and New Jersey busy or two years or more.

Suit and counter suits were followed by reconciliations and further suits. Mrs. Young charged her husband with cruelty and drunkenness.

Young, in turn, charged her with corrupting the morals of their 8-year-old daughter, Rosebelle (Rosebud), in failing to wear sufficient clothing in the house.

Poincare Ridicules Soviet Plot Story, Denying France Is Involved

(Raymond Poincare, former president and premier of France, in the accompanying signed article denies all charges made by the Soviet state prosecutor, Nikolai V. Krilenko, in which M. PARIS, Dec. 3.—The mental extravaganzas of the Soviet do not even merit a shrug of the shoulders.

Neither the denial that I gave to the ridiculous assertions of the Bolshevist prosecutor, nor the similar course followed in Moscow by M. Jean Herbette, our ambassador to the Soviet, at the instance of M. Briand (French foreign minister), has served to put M. Stalin (Soviet dictator), on guard against the mad diversion that he has sought out as a result of the woeful miscarriage of the five-year plan.

They have begun, with a lot of fuss, before a carefully rehearsed crowd, a prosecution of those Russian groups that they describe under the name of "the Industrial Party," and they shamelessly accuse these men of having contrived, in complicity with France and England, a plot against Soviet Russia.

FORD, EDISON IN CITY

The nation's celebrated cronies, Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison, were Pittsburgh guests today on a brief family visit.

Accompanied by Mrs. Ford and Mrs. Edison, they arrived over the Pennsylvania Railroad this morning in Ford's private car, Fair Lane, from the Edison home at Orange, N. J., en route to Detroit.

After breakfast in their car the party posed for photographers, but had little to say. Edison was bundled in a chinchilla overcoat and wore arctics. Ford wore his customary derby.

Ford was asked about his views of unemployment, but answered:

"I do not wish to discuss that at present."

They boarded automobiles for the home of Mrs. Halbert K. Hitchcock, 5710 Bartlett street. Mr. Hitchcock, a well known engineer in the plate glass industry, died 10 days ago. Mrs. Hitchcock and Mrs. Edison are sisters.

The party had luncheon at the Hitchcock home and spent several hours quietly. Ford took a nap. They were to continue their journey to Detroit late today.

STEEL PRICE UP, RECOVERY SEEN

Evidencing faith in the revival of business activity in the early months of next year, the steel industry has advanced prices $1 a ton. This marks the first concerted movement to raise prices on heavy types of steel in over two years.

Carnegie Steel Company, principal subsidiary of the United States Steel Corporation has increased prices $1 a ton on deliveries during the first quarter of 1931. The new minimum quotation for bars, plates and shapes is $1.65 base, Pittsburgh, per hundred pounds.

The action taken today follows the establishment three weeks ago of a minimum of $1.60 a hundred pounds, which brought the downward trend of prices to a close. The $1.60 minimum price was $5 a ton under the published quotation at the beginning of 1929.

Bethlehem Steel Corporation, following the lead of the Carnegie Company, raised its price $1 a ton on bars, shapes and plates for first quarter delivery.

Officials of the Inland Steel Company, largest independent in the Chicago district, said today that it has not yet opened its books for first quarter business but plan to announce price increases of $1 to $2 a ton on bars, plates and shapes.

Other independents are expected to follow the advance.

Princess Margaret To Wed Gottfried

STUTTGART, Germany, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The engagement was announced here today of the hereditary Prince Gottfried Von Hohenlohe-Langenburg to Princess Margaret of Greece, eldest daughter of Prince Andrew of Greece and Princess Alice of Battenberg. The bridegroom is 33 and Princess Margaret 25. She is a niece of Prince Christopher, who married the late Mrs. W. B. Leeds, of Cleveland, O.

Talkies for Parks Likely Next Year

Pittsburgh may have Sunday "talkies" next summer as the result of a survey made by accoustical engineers. Difficulty was encountered last summer in securing suitable silent pictures, so that the change to sound was regarded necessary. The engineers' report, to be submitted to the Mayor, is said to show the feasibility of talking movies in the parks.

Cantor's N. Y. Property For Sale; Going West

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Eddie Cantor, who in "1929 A. C." (after crash), dictated the gag, "Brother, I wasn't in the market—I was under it," today offered for sale all his realty holdings in and about New York.

But the only reason he's selling out, the comedian said, is that he's moving to Hollywood.

Included is his new house at Great Neck, L. I., which he called "The Cantor Home for Girls"—he and Mrs. Cantor have six—and whose original plans, he wrote, "Looked exactly like the White House, 50 per cent of the Grand Central Station, and the entire right side of Madison Square Garden."

Also for sale are 100,000 square feet of lots at Great Neck and a Brooklyn apartment house.

The comedian, who announced eight months ago his retirement from Broadway, will devote himself to making talking pictures, it was said.

REPORTER FIRES ON PREMIER

MADRID, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A newspaper reporter gathered with other correspondents in the office of Premier Berenguer today drew a pistol as the Premier entered and fired at him. The bullet went wild and the reporter was overpowered by guards.

Berenguer was not injured.

The reporter, a man named Joaquin Lligo, represented the newspaper El Sol, of Madrid.

HAVANA, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A policeman was shot fatally today in a clash with demonstrating students at the scheduled reopening of the National University.

The students had gathered at the university and, after listening to a number of addresses by fellow classmen, marched in a body through the business district. The police halted the procession and requested the leaders not to continue farther. A volley of shots answered the request and one policeman fell.

Jobless Apple Vendors Get Supplies in Taxis

Several apple salesmen from the ranks of the unemployed appeared at the produce yards in taxicabs today, those in charge reported, for their boxes of fruit, which they retail at strategic street corners at a profit of $2 or more a box.

Those who came in cabs, in order to transport several boxes to their sale districts, were allowed only one box at a time, it was said. About 95 who came on foot or by street car were not restricted. There are 88 to 100 apples to a crate, sold on credit at $2 a box to unemployed, and retailed at 5 cents each. Today's workers had obtained 224 crates by mid-afternoon.

Yesterday the men disposed of 137 boxes. Some of the salesmen asked for four and five boxes today, because of the thriving business of yesterday.

DRY FUND INCREASE FACES FIGHT BY 'ANTIS' IN HOUSE

PLAN TO HIRE 500 AGENTS OPPOSED

Foes Charge Waste of Cash In Enforcement Efforts; No Repeal Debate Ahead

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The 1930 congressional battle over prohibition may be opened today with a decision of the House "anti-dry bloc" to fight the request of Attorney General Mitchell for $2,000,000 additional to employ 500 agents in his campaign to dry up the country.

Representative Linthicum (Dem.), of Maryland, chairman of the "bloc," who called his executive committee together, announced he would fight the increased sum. He asserted:

"I'm tired of pouring money down a rat hole."

SABATH OPPOSES PLAN

Representative Sabath (Dem.), of Illinois, another active anti-dry, also announced he will oppose the increased fund, saying:

"In the past I have taken the position that appropriation of huge sums only helped to show that the law cannot be enforced, but experience has shown enforcement funds are wasted.

"I maintain you couldn't enforce the law by using the Army and Navy. It would demoralize those services just as it has the coast guard."

The prohibition battle, it was indicated, will be limited largely to appropriations unless the Wickersham commission makes definite recommendations.

Representative Graham (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, which last year held hearings on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, said he did not plan to bring the question before his committee this session.

Many drys have indicated they would consider the Wickersham commission's report. Generally they are reserving judgment until it is made.

Representative Cooper, (Rep.), of Ohio, long known as one of the leading drys of the House, announced he would not oppose a referendum on prohibition. He wrote:

"It is probable that sometime the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed."

Representative Fort (Rep.), of New Jersey, who opposed Dwight Morrow for the senatorial nomination as a dry, expressed opposition to a referendum on prohibition.

SHEPPARD ANSWERS

Senator Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, today voiced the drys' answer to the new drive for modification of prohibition to permit manufacture and sale of 4 per cent beer and wine, for which Senator Bingham (Rep.), of Connecticut, introduced a bill.

Sheppard said:

"Congress is as dry as ever; there is still an overwhelming majority in both branches in favor of prohibition. There is no chance for modification of the Volstead act."

Davis Offers Boal Post as Secretary

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—Senator James J. Davis has asked Frank Boal, former Pittsburgh newspaperman, to accept appointment as his secretary.

Boal is now a member of the Washington staff of the Associated Press. He has taken the offer under advisement and will inform Senator Davis of his decision within a few days.

THOSE IMPORTANT USHERS—By Quin Hall

an advertising account of $74,000 he was asked to collect by the John R. McKitridge Company, printers, of Philadelphia, for printing he said was ordered by Davis in the campaign.

Senator Dale (Rep.), of Vermont, asked how Weaver knew it was a Davis account, and Weaver replied:

"Because it was shown by evidence placed into my hands by the McKitridge Company for collection. Davis disclaimed knowledge of the account."

"How do you know, that?"

"Because he sent me a letter to that effect."

THREE DAVIS LETTERS

Subsequent questioning brought out that Davis wrote three letters to Weaver. The first offered to pay in part, but the others disclaimed all knowledge of the account.

SUIT THREATENED

At one point in the exchange of letters between Davis and the collection agency, mention was made of a possible suit against Davis and Samuel Vauclain, treasurer of the committee, unless the alleged debt was paid. Nye asked:

"Has there been any evidence of repudiation of the claim by the Davis-Brown committee?"

Weaver replied:

"There has been nothing but evasion."

Weaver said printed matter shipped to Moose conventions was not contracted for by the fraternal organization, but was ordered by the Davis-Brown committee. The printing consisted of 150,000 biographies. Davis is a Moose official.

One of the letters submitted quoted the Pennsylvania senator as saying:

"I do not want to hide anything from the Nye committee. I know nothing at all of the accounts you have."

William R. Douglas, of Camp Hill, Pa., secretary to William S. Vare and organizer for Brown, testified that expenditures would have been as great in the Pennsylvania primary if Davis had been off the ticket. He added the cost probably would have been the same if Davis had been the only one on the ticket, adding:

"It's just the cost of conducting an election machine."

HALF MILLION NEEDED

Senator Dale asked if $500,000 would be a "fair" start for a campaign chest in Pennsylvania, and drew the reply:

"Very fair."

Nye asked:

"How much of that would be allotted for Davis, assuming that that was the goal set?"

Douglas replied:

"That's a hard matter. It's unfair to charge most to him. Mr. Davis was a popular candidate."

Douglas said he was not associated with Samuel Vauclain, treasurer of one of the campaign committees, but collected funds for the committee.

to repeal or amend the Sabbath observance laws.

BLUE LAWS PARLEY

Armstrong's announcement that he, Mayor Kline and Senator Coyne would meet Pinchot in Philadelphia was taken as an indication that Allegheny County is not to go unrewarded for its big Pinchot majority at the November election, which was more than sufficient to bring victory to the former governor.

At the conference on the Blue Laws, besides Councilman Little and Representative Musmanno, will be Councilman M. J. Muldowney, of Oakland, and C. B. Connelley, of the North Side.

GOLLMAR NOT GOING

Frank I. Gollmar, former judge and Pinchot aide in the campaign, asked why he and County Commissioner C. C. McGovern, Pinchot manager for Western Pennsylvania, had not gone to Philadelphia for the conference, said:

"I wanted to give Mayor Kline and Commissioner Armstrong a chance to talk to Mr. Pinchot by themselves and to iron out the ideas they had in mind. I thought they could get along better without my being present."

Asked if he had been invited, Gollmar answered:

"I don't care to say."

McGovern was not at his office today.

Pinchot Threat Worries Philadelphia Leaders

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Gov.-Elect Gifford Pinchot left Philadelphia organization chieftains pondering today without any explanation over his implied threat voiced here last night during an address to the United Business Men's Committee.

The Pike County forester's threat inferring he may strike back at the so-called Philadelphia "war board" came while he was reciting the hunting experience of his son, Cliff, who forgot he had a gun when he saw a deer yesterday. The governor-elect said:

"I am here on a hunt, too, but I haven't forgotten I have a gun."

Another outstanding development of the governor-elect's visit here was the tendering to Dr. Ellen C. Potter of her old post as head of the state department of public welfare. She was given a week to decide.

SIXTY MILLIONS ASKED FOR U.S. BUILDINGS

House Committee Acts Promptly in Job Relief; Air Mail Here Approved

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—The first congressional step to expand federal activities to provide employment was taken today when the House appropriations committee recommended a boost from $48,000,000 to $60,000,000 in the annual public buildings appropriation.

The recommendation was made in reporting the annual Treasury-postoffice supply bill to the house.

The $60,000,000 sum, the committee explained, together with an existing balance of $72,558,379, will make available $132,558,379 for public buildings in a 20-month period ending June 30, 1932. More money may be asked later in the session.

SPEED PLANS

To enable the Treasury to speed the public buildings program, the committee allowed $725,000 additional to employ outside architects.

In reporting the first of the big supply bills, the committee slashed deeply in the allotments of both departments in an effort to keep the government "out of the red."

The combined Treasury-Postoffice appropriations recommended total $1,083,553,943. The budget cut $86,906,095 under last year's figures, while the committee slashed the budget $20,726,410.

Permanent annual appropriations not included in this total brings the combined cost of the Treasury and Postoffice for next year to over $2,000,000,000.

The bill includes a boost of $475,680 for the bureau of alcohol of the Treasury, a part of the prohibition enforcement regime. The total for the bureau is $4,814,420.

FUNDS FOR RAIDERS

The Coast Guard was allotted $32,897,582, an increase of $195,526 over last year. The Coast Guard's allottment for anti-smuggling work is $13,389,850, which includes prohibition enforcement on navigable waters.

The bill increases the appropriation for foreign mail from $29,500,000 to $36,000,000, in part for payment of subventions to American merchant vessels.

Domestic air mail funds are raised from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 and foreign air mail will cost $4,000,000.

Two million dollars is allowed for new air mail routes as follows: Louisville-Fort Worth; Kansas City-Denver; Pittsburgh-Norfolk; St. Paul-Winnipeg; Richmond-Jacksonville; Greensboro-Columbus-Augusta; Pueblo-Fort Worth; Pueblo-El Paso.

The committee denied a budget recommendation of more than a million dollars for increases of salaries in the Treasury Department on the ground that economic conditions do not warrant the increase.

ernment of their country I do not know, nor do I care.

The association attacked formally denies it.

But, in any case, what I declare anew is that if this conspiracy took place, no one in France was concerned in it.

Necessarily, there must be some very credulous people in Moscow if really there are any who believe, or who have believed, these fairy tales they recount.

To further what object were these pretty stories invented?

Was it to try to justify making rigorous measures even more violent?

Was it to seek to present Soviet Russia to the world's eyes as an innocent victim of French and English persecution?

EXPECTS FURTHER LIGHT

I do not know.

It will not be long before we become better acquainted with the secret springs of this suspicious machination.

But henceforth, if there are by chance any judges at Moscow, they would be well advised to do their best to unmask all at the same time both the prosecutors and those among the accused who appear to entangle themselves and to collaborate to propagate lies.

I should, in any case, repeat that neither M. Briand nor I, nor the French general staff, knew anything either in 1928—nor before nor since—of the projects true or false, of the Industrial party; never, in consequence, did we approve of or encourage them; never did our general staff, then under the direction of M. Paul Painleve and Gen. Deberey, have the paradoxical idea of preparing an attack on Russia in collaboration either with some Russians or others.

OPPOSED WRANGEL

So far as I am concerned, at the time of the expedition of Gen Wrangel, I publicly condemned operations of that sort as illusory and dangerous. You have only to refer to the Revue Des Deux Mondes for December, 1920, to see in what severe terms that condemnation was couched.

Had I know of the intentions today attributed to the Industrial Party and which it expressly denies, I should assuredly have envisaged it as an adventure even more perilous than that of Gen Wrangel, and I should never have gone into it either secretly or openly.

I should love to have someone tell me in what mysterious room the Russian conspirators talked with my twin, and who he described himself as being when he gave them a hearing.

I should love, above all, to have someone show me the supposed plans of the French general staff, and point out to me where and how and under what conditions the contemplated attack on Soviet Russia was to have been made.

But enough of this humor! Let us quit the world of the insane and return to the world in which we live.

GARY, Ind., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—While the five youths who were bound over to the grand jury on charges of attacking and murdering 18-year-old Arlene Draves were being held at Crown Point today, police were obtaining statements from others who attended the drinking party which resulted in the girl's death.

Authorities intimated that the prisoners were removed to Crown Point to avert mob violence. The grand jury will reconvene there Monday. Funeral services were held yesterday.

The youths waived preliminary hearing on pleas of not guilty yesterday.

Gary police announced an unnamed girl witness who attended the fatal "wine party," revealed all details.

WELFARE FUND PASSES GOAL

The Welfare Fund of $1,520,248 has been over-subscribed. Late collections, totaling $74,672, reported at today's luncheon, boosted the final figures to $1,552,324, or about $32,000 over the amount asked. Announcement of the result of the final drive, which was carried over from last week when the fund was still short of the goal, was received with cheers.

More than 102,000 contributors made the fund possible. This was an increase of more than 30,000 over the number of contributors listed last year.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Martha Bevins, 20, the "flying housewife," took off from Glenn Curtiss airport today for the Pacific Coast in an attempt to wrest the woman's East-to-West flight record from Miss Ruth Nichols, but a short time later was forced down at Jacksonville, Pa., near Easton.

Uses Bright Garb For Child Safety

CONGRESS TO SEEK FUND CONTROL

Members for Unemployment Appropriation but Would Supervise Expenditures

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The Senate today adopted without debate a resolution by Senator Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota, requesting President Hoover to submit the report of his unemployment commission, provided it is not "incompatible with public interest."

By WM. S. NEAL.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—While both Democratic and Republican leaders in Congress were ready and anxious today to appropriate huge sums for the relief of the unemployment situation, there were indications that a strong effort will be made to have Congress itself retain control of the expenditure, and not a cabinet committee, as proposed by President Hoover in his annual message yesterday.

Mr. Hoover's proposal was that Congress appropriate between $100,000,000 and $150,000,000 for public works during the next six months, the sum to be expended at the direction of a committee of his cabinet.

DEMOCRATIC PLAN

Democratic leaders, while anxious to make the money immediately available, favor the expenditure under the control of Congress under specific appropriation instead of at the direction of the cabinet committee. In this they are supported to a considerable extent by Republican leaders.

The Republicans confessed to some embarrassment in meeting Mr. Hoover's plan because in the Wilson administration they opposed the grants of large amounts of money to be spent at the direction of the administration rather than by Congress itself.

The President's plan is to make a lump sum available, to be distributed for highway, public buildings, rivers and harbors and similar work, by a cabinet committee upon recommendation of the President.

"PRACTICAL THING"

Representative Wood (Rep.), of Indiana, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said:

"I think it is a practical thing to do.

"The fund would not be used on new projects, but would be distributed on projects already authorized in such way as to speed them. It might prevent a wholesale branching into fields where the money would be wasted."

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader, indorsed the plan on the ground that it was a practical way to speed public works.

Three Democratic leaders in the House fiscal affairs—Representative Garner, of Texas, minority leader; Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, and Representative Ayres, of Kansas, veteran member of the same committee—all assailed the President's idea.

"ABOUT FACE"

The President, they said, should request specific appropriations to be acted upon by Congress.

Byrns recalled that in 1919 a proposal was made to give Mr. Hoover, then food administrator, a blanket fund of $100,000,000 to provide food abroad. Republicans opposed it on the ground that Congress should make specific appropriations. Among the opponents of the plan was Chairman Wood, of the Appropriation Committee.

New proposals for relief of unemployment were flowing in today. Representative Huddleston (Dem.), of Alabama, proposed a $50,000,000 fund to feed the needy, and Representative McKeown (Dem.), of Oklahoma, proposed a year's moratorium on mortgages of Federal Land banks in drought-stricken areas.

Coolidge Favors More Vigorous Rail Policy

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Dec. 3.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

The report that the railroads are to assume a more aggressive attitude in the assertion of their rights and the protection of their property is an encouraging development.

A generation ago the railroads were found to be interfering too much in governmental action which in no way concerned them. They were charged with being in politics when they should have been only in transportation. In reforming themselves, they went so far in the opposite direction that their business, and, therefore, the public welfare have suffered.

Calvin Coolidge

Railroad representation at Washington has been able and wise, but under the present policy not always assertive. The important legislation of 10 years ago came from the initiative of a voluntary association of savings banks and insurance companies holding railroad securities. If the railroads can now speak for themselves, it indicates a return of sane public confidence in transportation management which will benefit the country. Holding one-twentieth of the national wealth the railroads can do more for the welfare of the wage earner, agriculture and industry than any other single agency. We do not want any return of railroad political activity, but we do need such action as will protect their interests in legislation and regulation.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

Co-Ed Debaters Lose Fight To Prove They're Human

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—University of Michigan co-eds were defeated in their attempt to prove themselves human beings in a debate with men students last night.

The feminine team, representing Zeta Phi Eta, women's society, lost to the negative team of Alpha Nu, men's forensic society, by a vote of the audience, made up of members of the two organizations.

The negative attack was centered about Rudyard Kipling's "A Rag, a Bone and a Hank of Hair," which was used to bring out the argument that the co-ed is either "angelic" or "devilish," and as such, highly inhuman. The hours male students spend in the parlors of women's dormitories "while the lady dressed" were presented as devilish.

The young women contended the co-ed is human because of her diet, declaring sundaes, salads, et al, are things no animal could subsist upon. Answering the plaint of the males that co-eds cannot think logically, the co-eds said it is "not human to think logically" and declared themselves "the equals of men taking the mean average."

For their victory the boys were awarded as a trophy a small green porcelain donkey.

AVIATRIX'S PITTSBURGH BACKER FLYING TO AID HER

WINGS FROM MIAMI TO ISLAND

Flying Boat Hauls Gasoline And Supplies; Mechanic to Repair Keith-Miller Ship

International News Service.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 3.—A second relief expedition to Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix, left Miami early today.

John Liggett, of Pittsburgh, a backer of the woman's Pittsburgh-Havana round-trip flight, took off for Andros Island, in the Bahamas group, in a flying boat piloted by Donald Vandewater.

Walter Christensen, an aviation mechanic, who will aid in preparing Mrs. Keith-Miller's plane for a resumption of its return flight to Pittsburgh, also was a passenger in the boat.

The party carried gasoline and other supplies. Mrs. Keith-Miller's plane landed in the brush on the eastern coast of Andros Island. Because of its light weight—about 900 pounds—there is not expected to be much difficulty in removing it to the beach, where a take-off may be made at low tide today.

If the take-off is successful the party may return to Miami this afternoon. The Curtiss flying boat will act as escort for Mrs. Keith-Miller's plane.

Stone bruises on her feet incurred in the 16-mile hike to Mango Bay and several scratches were the only injuries suffered by Mrs. Keith-Miller in the forced landing, Liggett said. The plane was undamaged.

Liggett made public a statement sent here by the woman flier. She said:

"I am most unhappy about myself, and as an experienced flier I feel ashamed to think I failed to reach my objective. The kindness of the natives of Andros and the people of the Bahamas will ever be a happy memory."

Mrs. Keith-Miller branded as "despicable" any person who might suggest that she had flown from her course as a publicity stunt. She said:

"Contrary to reports, I took off with favorable weather report and flew on the compass course, which was given me. At the end of an hour a gale from the West carried me far to the East. Storm clouds arose.

FLIES CLOSE TO WATER

"I went down close to the water to try and check the direction of the wind, and it then occurred to me that I might be in the Gulf of Florida. Climbing to 7,000 feet, I stayed up about five hours, until I saw pale green water. So I knew I must be near land. A haze had developed, with squally weather west and east.

"Two fishing boats were anchored in smooth water. I hoped they could indicate the direction of Miami. The colored crew did not comprehend. So I just continued on my course. I saw land and thought it was Florida, as my strip maps tallied with the surrounding country.

"Again running low, I had to land, and came down without apparent damage. I walked 16 miles to the telegraph station at Mangrove Cave to let everybody know I was safe, but found the wireless not working.

"The sea was too rough for any boat to leave for Nassau, the nearest point of communication, and so I had to delay until the storm abated.

"I am deeply grateful to Sir Charles Orr, K. C. M. G., of the Bahamas, and to all who were so kind during my stay-over."

FLEW LICENSED PLANE

Harwood R. Smith, of the Aerial Enterprises, which sponsored the flight of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller from Pittsburgh to Havana, today said the Eagle Rock monoplane owned and flown on the flight by Mrs. Keith-Miller was licensed by the government. He added:

"The government would not license an unsafe plane. The plane was serviced and conditioned by Curtiss-Wright both here and at Havana. When Mrs. Keith-Miller arrived in Pittsburgh we asked what she needed. She mentioned only a parachute, which we procured for her."

Second Dope Cache Worth $75,000 Found

Ford said he believed the narcotics were stolen two weeks ago while being shipped from Indianapolis to New Orleans, and buried by a gang which intended to return for them.

GUARD MEETING OF REICHSTAG

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS,
International News Service.

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—With the parliamentary buildings heavily guarded to prevent any unruly demonstrations, the Reichstag met today for its winter session, facing the task of grappling with serious domestic and foreign problems.

The chamber met under a virtual financial dictatorship, headed by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening, whose emergency budget measures were put through by President Von Hindenburg by decree under article 48 of the constitution.

Indications were that the body would not attempt to over-ride the decrees, and that Chancellor Bruening was assured of a comfortable majority when the issues go to a vote Saturday. Bitter battles, however, are anticipated on measures of foreign policy.

Keep Your Money In Motion; That's How You Got It

Just a few items overlooked in the Presidents message:

Don't buy anything on margin. Especially magistrates' jobs.

All you need with a raccoon coat is glass eyes and you will be a perfect rug.

When doing your Christmas shopping never carry the bundle by the string.

Remember the poor letter carriers. Don't look a gift hoss in the mouth or send him through the mail.

We have a surplus in the Treasury. That is, Andy Mellon and we have it.

Well, then, Andy has it by himself. Anyway, it proves there's many a live stamp in the dead letter office.

Keep your money in circulation. That's how you got it.

Carry your money in your pocket. Give the boys in the subway a chance.

RABID DOG BITES FAMILY OF 4

Four members of an Overbrook family today were notified by officials of the Animal Rescue League to submit themselves for Pasteur treatment after a dog that had bitten them was declared suffering from a virulent case of rabies.

Last Friday the animal, a family pet, bit Mrs. Felicia Cancilla, Briggs way, Overbrook, on the ankle. The same day the dog bit her two sons, James, 6, and Eugene, 5. The husband and father, Samuel Cancilla, treated the victims at home.

Sunday the dog bit Cancilla. It died Monday. The carcass was turned over to the Animal Rescue League, where a laboratory test showed the animal had hydrophobia, according to J. Robb Snyder, secretary of the league.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Dec. 3 (AP.)—It took the Bishop of Aberdeen and Orkney to give the lie to all those vile canards about Hollywood, the movie capital.

He told the Rotary Club here today:

As for the Mormons in Utah, whom he also visited, he said:

"I always thought they were rather dissolute and strove to emulate King Solomon. I was surprised to find that they had long since become as monogamous as ourselves."

Bridal Gown Color Scheme Stirs '400'

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Society is stirred by the color scheme of gowns at the latest fashionable wedding. When Miss Jane Porter became Mrs. Barclay Kountze Douglas she had a gown of iceablue silk and a pale blue veil. The maid of honor wore turquoise blue velvet. Bridesmaids wore Venetian red velvet. The bride carried artificial gold lilies. Bridemaids had bouquets of artificial gold fruit edged with gold lace.

SLEUTH BLOCKS ELOPEMENT

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Her wedding interrupted by a detective, Miss Helen Fuhrman, 18, daughter of E. R. Fuhrman, vice president of the American Tobacco Company, was on the way to her home in Richmond today. Her father persuaded her by telephone to delay her marriage to Ivor L. Lloyd, 20, a musician.

Telling her parents she was going to visit a girl friend, Miss Fuhrman left Richmond Monday night and came to New York to meet her fiance. They decided to seal their acquaintance of two years' standing and went to City Hall for a marriage license.

In the meantime, Fuhrman jumped at conclusions and asked police here to watch the License Bureau. As a result, a detective intercepted the couple as they were filling out the application and took them to headquarters.

After the talk with her father, the girl decided that Cupid would best be served by a Virginia wedding in January.

BOZO LAVERY FIRED FROM FORCE

Detectiwe Dismissed for Alleged Slurs at Walsh; Alibi Defense Collapses

For the third time in his hectic police career, Precinct Detectiwe Joseph (Bozo) Lavery was fired today at an open hearing before the Police Trial Board, where he was arraigned on a charge of directing insulting remarks at his superior officer—Police Supt. Peter F. Walsh.

The remarks were told at the hearing by Sergt. Russell Smythe, of the superintennent's office, and were promptly denied by Boss Lavery came to the hearing armed with an "airtight" alibi, but it was torn apart by Smythe and Detective Sergt. James Waggoner, after the latter had been called by the board.

TELLS OF THREAT

Smythe told the board that Bozo had threatened to visit United States Commissioner Roger Knox and tell the official "something that would blow the lid off this town."

Smythe said he met Lavery near the postoffice, Wednesday, November 26. Smythe said that Bozo used plain words to describe his opinion of Walsh, and that he ended the conversation with offering Smythe his badge and keys. Smythe said he reported the incident to Walsh.

Lavery took the stand to deny talking to Smythe on the date mentioned. He said he had met Smythe November 24, but had not engaged in conversation. Lavery told the board he was in Monongahela City November 26 and that he had called Waggoner to report off. Waggoner denied that Lavery had called him.

SLAP AT ENGELSBERG

Inspector James N. Hoey asked Lavery if he knew any reason why Smythe would manufacture testimony against him, and the precinct detective replied:

"Not unless Mr. Joseph Englesberg is trying to put the finger on me."

It was the only time Englesberg, Third Ward Republican chairman, was mentioned at the hearing.

Bank Business Good Despite Failures

Electrical 'Ear' to Split Sounds Shown Here

Invented to separate various sounds of whirring electric motors, a portable "electric ear" was demonstrated publicly for the first time yesterday at the Westinghouse Research Laboratories by J. P. Foltz, its developer.

Entirely self-actuated the apparatus, somewhat similar to a portable radio, can be carried to water wheel generators at remote power stations, to motors in an automobile factory and to motors in ships at sea and even in submarines.

Consisting of a microphone, an amplifier of several stages of audio frequency to raise the energy level, a filter circuit which permits only one sound frequency to pass at a time, and a meter for reading amplitudes, the apparatus weighs only 60 pounds. Sensitiveness on the "selector" from one to 10,000 are possible.

The apparatus, according to Foltz, has an express purpose in noise reduction. In line with the studies of various cities in an attempt to reduce nerve-wracking din, the first step is to analyze noise, and the next is to eliminate it, Foltz declared. He used this illustration of the "ear's" function:

"When an apple is dropped on a wooden floor, the 'thud' which 'strikes' the human ear is made up of a great number of sounds having no resemblance to the 'thud.' The impact starts a series of complex 'broadcasts,' called sound waves. It is entirely possible to produce silence by sound waves which fit into each other."

It is anticipated the "ear" will detect loose wrist pins, piston rings, main bearings and warped propellers in airplanes long before the sound would be detected by the human ear.

HOOVER WARNS ON TAX CUT

year end, in remainder by temporary borrowing. He was confident of the return of healthy surpluses, out of which the temporary borrowings must be repaid.

Meanwhile, a $30,000,000 surplus appears to be in sight for the next fiscal year, Mr. Hoover found. This would be much more than wiped out by continuance of the $160,000,000 tax reduction through 1931. With revenue shrinking and emergency expenditures mounting, the tax reduction accordingly should be waived in the interest of a balanced budget and a "sound basis" for federal finances.

To the same end, and in evident expectation of early business improvement, the President urged that emergency measures for unemployment relief be limited to the next six months.

REVENUES SHRINK

Shrinking revenues, coupled with an increase of over $225,000,000 in this fiscal year's expenditures, due to unemployment relief and to more liberal aid to veterans, would leave the government's pocketbook lighter by about $655,000,000 than was anticipated a year ago.

But this figure has been pulled down, the President pointed out, by using for running expenses the $185,000,000 of interest payments on foreign debts, and by deferring until the next fiscal year the provision of a $100,000,000 revolving loan fund for the Federal Farm Board.

These steps and certain economies cut the expected deficit to $180,000,000. The message continued:

"I do not look with favor on any attempt to meet this deficit by reduction of the statutory redemption of the public debt, which now amounts to about $440,000,000 per annum.

EMPLOYMENT AID

"The adverse balance can be met by reducing the general fund balance from the amount in it at the beginning of the year, supplemented, if necessary, by temporary borrowing by the treasury.

"It will probably be necessary for congress to appropriate additional money for expenditure within the present fiscal year in order to increase employment and to provide for the drought situation."

BUDGET TOTAL

The President's budget total included $738,000,000 for the postal service, which is payable out of postal revenues. Deducting this, the total of estimated expenditures for the fiscal year 1932, payable from the Treasury, was $3,932,842,000, or $221,000,000 more than this year.

The increase was accounted for chiefly by the $100,000,000 Farm Board fund, $110,000,000 of additional outlay for veterans, and $51,500,000 added outlay for construction work on the federal highway system. As an offset it was estimated that taxe refunds will be $92,000,000 smaller than last year.

Dry law enforcement will cost the country $3,000,000 more next year if the estimates are approved as submitted. Mr. Hoover stepped up the Prohibition Bureau's proposed appropriation from $9,050,000 to $1,550,000, without comment. This would provide for several hundred more dry agents, as Director Woodcock has urged.

RUSSIA POSSESSES in vast quantities, and in quality unexcelled, the manganese necessary to modern life and used by you every day although you may not know it.

It is the metal that makes steel stronger. You use it, in the axle and other parts of your automobile, big or little.

Our big steel companies get their manganese from Chiatura in Russia. We produce the precious metal here on a modest scale, and Russia threatens to swamp our manganese industry.

How to protect that without making the public pay too dearly is the question.

EUROPE LEARNS of a five-power alliance including Hungary, Italy, Albania, Turkey and Bulgaria, to compel a revision of the Versailles and other peace treaties.

A majority of human beings, including millions in this country, believe that those treaties were unjust, and dictated by war hatreds and bitterness.

They will not live.

BLAZE BLAMED ON INCENDIARY

Fire which early today destroyed the interior of a one-story frame dwelling at 4640 Plummer street was laid to incendiarism by police and firemen.

The bathtub was said to have been partly filled with gasoline when firemen arrived.

Edward J. Delaney, a confectioner of 4644 Plummer street, and Frank Spruce, of El Paso street, broke into the house today after discovering it ablaze and attempted to extinguish the flames. Smoke filled the Delaney home, which adjoined the burning structure, and routed Delaney's wife, their five children, Edna, 22; Eleanor, 18; Edward, 16; Jack, 12, and William, 9, and the children's grandfather, John Lucas.

The families of Paul Grestner and Thomas Callahan, of 2834 Walnut street, McKeesport, were homeless today as the result of a fire which destroyed the Grestner apartment on the second floor of a two-story building early today.

Overheated Furnace Causes Fire in Home

Fire, due to an overheated furnace, caused $400 damage to the home of Samuel Caplan, 5447 Hobart street, this morning. Mrs. Pearl Caplan and her sister, Esther Pearlman, were aroused by a maid who detected smoke while preparing breakfast.

Santo Leone and John Degenaro, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are on trial before Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, charged with possessing and passing counterfeit $20 Federal Reserve Bank notes in Johnstown, Somerset and other nearby towns.

Angelo Perrago, of Johnstown, a coal miner, a co-defendant, entered a plea of guilty. Sebastian Passiangino, of Brooklyn, fourth man named in the alleged conspiracy, sent word through counsel that he is ill and unable to stand trial. His $2,500 bond was forfeited and he will be tried later. The government is represented in the case by Assistant United States Attorney Zeno Fritz. Attorney Louis Little is counsel for the defense.

On motion of Councilman George J. Kambach, the body directed the Department of Public Works to advertise the opening of the roadway from its present terminal at the portals of the Liberty Tubes to South Tenth street.

SUES OVER AUTO CRASH IN SOUTH

Samuel S. Lubow, of New York, filed two suits in Federal Court, each for $50,000 damages, against Samuel Wilson and H. C. McClellan, both of Altoona, growing out of a collision February 5 on the Dixie Highway, near White City, Fla., of automobiles owned by Lubow and Wilson. McClellan, according to the bill of complaint, was driving Wilson's machine, and Wilson was in the car.

The bills of complaint say the wife of Lubow in the latter's machine was injured and died in a hospital, and that Lubow, since the accident, has been partially paralyzed. Lubow alleged the Wilson automobile was being driven recklessly at high speed.

2 MEXICANS DIE IN BORDER FIGHT

EL PASO, Tex., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Two unidentified Mexicans were slain and six companions were routed in a gun fight along the international boundary last night with three United States immigration border patrolmen they attempted to trap.

The patrolmen, attracted to Cordova Island—the "no man's land" between El Paso and Mexico—narrowly escaped death when the Mexicans began shooting from ambush.

The patrolmen had been following two of the band, suspecting them of being aliens.

Authorities here believe a liquor smuggling ring had attempted retaliation for the killing by patrolmen several days ago of two smugglers west of El Paso.

JEWISH HOME SITE BOUGHT

Plans for a new $500,000 institution for the Jewish Home for Aged are in preparation, it was revealed today. The 17-acre Brown estate, near the Homestead Bridge, has been purchased and will be the site.

The new development, which will be under way in the near future, will contain an elaborate building, large enough to accommodate 150 beds, a modern hospital, synagogue, recreation rooms and other facilities to give the aged all comforts of a real home. Max Shapiro, superintendent, revealed.

The home will have a special wing for the care of incurables.

The present home, now located at 2500 Brereton street, is in its twenty-fifth year. Mr. Shapiro has been connected with the institution for 10 years. J. H. Frank and Abe Seder are president and vice president of the association.

TICKLETOES

Dear Little Girls:

Let me tell you about my new WONDER DOLL. All the little girls who have seen "Tickletoes" can't resist loving her, and naturally they would love her, because she's so life like . . . and what little girl doesn't love a real live baby? She is the happiest doll you ever saw, dressed elegantly in pink organdy, with real stockings, cute little moccasins, rubber panties and a darling cap with lace ribbons on it. Her legs and arms are of rubber, and her soft little toes and fingers are just like a real live baby's. She is unbreakable and has three different voices and is 20 inches tall—just about as long as this newspaper page. Now, of course, hundreds of little girls in Pittsburgh and vicinity will want a "Tickletoes" dolly for all their very own. They are going to be easy to get. The Doll Lady is going to ask every little girl who wants one to do just a simple little thing for her, and if you want a "Tickletoes" clip out the coupon below, fill in your name and address, and she will send you a letter telling all the details.

OHIO STATE BROADCAST AMONG RADIO HIGHLIGHTS TONIGHT

The Lou'speaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—One of the best prescriptions for periodic insomnia-series is to turn the dial to Reinald Werrenrath when he gives voice to "Mandalay."

The most restless listener invariably joins in the chorus when Werrenrath airs the swinging rhythm of "Mandalay." He is the most persistent warbler of the ballad—and the most successful. He has been singing it for 20 years come Michaelmas Day.

Werrenrath was the first outstanding concert star to enlist under radio's banners. Recognizing that he has unusual radio personality, the broadcasters are going to see that he sticks.

The radio men are also cementing their relations with Willard Robison, the blues and "spirichel" chanter. Robison has one of the most ingratiating voices on the air, but the broadcasters strangely are making it less and less audible. We would be willing to trade 10 crooners wah-wahing their way through "Go Home and Tell Your Mother" for one Robison voicing "Wake Up, Chillun, Wake Up."

* * *

Radio's symphony orchestras have never aired the rapid notes of the "Floradora" sextet. I should like to see them try it just to hear the sweep of the violins. The most successful violin sweep on the microphones is that given to the "Ride of the Valkries."

Grandpappy's Dances Now Being Aired

The ransackers of radio continue busy. They are now dusting off the old square dances of grandpappy. The old square dances should be aired if only to show that the jazz of grandpappy's grandchild is not as bad as it's painted.

* * *

Before another year is over, before Marconi's yacht goes to the barnacle-scrapers, the parlors of America, I'll wager my black shirt, will have heard the voice of Benito Mussolini.

Jobless Plea Made By Cardinal Hayes

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A plea that "the best minds" of the nation seek the means of ridding America of unemployment was made last night by Patrick Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York, in a radio address over station WEAF and a national hookup.

Cardinal Hayes warned that "unemployment is a potential torial menace of a very radical type."

NEW METHODS SPEED TRADE

Mental paralysis was one of the underlying causes for the business depression, with industry now showing an upward trend through the executive's realization that production and sales methods demanded a change, according to Dr. W. J. Donald before members of the National Glass Distributors Association, opening a two-day convention in the William Penn Hotel.

Dr. Donald, managing director of the American Management Association, and Dr. Ralph J. Watkins, business research director of the University of Pittsburgh, were speakers during the afternoon meeting that preceded a general business session and election of officers tomorrow. President S. C. Gilmore, of Philadelphia, presided.

Pointing out that instant reaction cannot follow a depression, Dr. Donald said:

The past three weeks have revealed a marked change in business. The mental paralysis of industry and executives has given away to analysis and research. Before we are favored with prosperity it will be necessary for industries and executives to recognize that conditions change rapidly. Markets, production and sales methods, and the consumers' attitude change and must be understood."

THEATER HERE TO GIVE JOBS

J. W. Hooley, theater manager, today explained that he would engage 50 to 200 responsible unemployed persons in selling tickets.

Each seller will be given $25 worth of 50-cent tickets to sell in the theater's community, and each evening will received 25 per cent of his sales. Each 50-cent ticket will admit two persons to a matinee.

Unemployed war veterans were mentioned by Mr. Hooley as the type he was especially anxious to aid.

SHOW DECREASE IN DELINQUENTS

A decrease in dependent and delinquent children in Allegheny County was shown today in the final report of the Pittsburgh Child Welfare Study, which credited the immigration restrictions, workmen's compensation and the mothers' assistance fund for the betterment.

Increased need for individual education and training rather than mass care was further emphasized to the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies for which a year was spent in making the study. The report revealed 36 institutions today care for 2,816 dependent children as against 37 homes with a population of 3,480 in 1916.

A children's division of the federation has been established in charge of Miss Henriette Lund to facilitate the development of work for unfortunate children. Miss Lund will serve as consultant to children's organizations, many of which are reported already availing themselves of this service.

The Lutheran Inner Mission is co-operating with the city in distribution of relief. Six full time workers have been added to the staff of Mrs. A. L. Stroud, family welfare supervisor, who has offices in the City-County Building. Additional office space has been added to the mission's offices in the Pittsburgh Life Building where many interviews are held daily.

'Tickletoes' Brings Joy to 100 Little Girls Daily

Dear Little Girls:

You can't imagine what a lovely time I am having these days. The Christmas rush for dolls is on in earnest and every day I am visited by 100 or more little girls who have already earned their "Tickletoes." They come in with their mammas, select their dolly and take her home.

You cannot realize how happy these little girls are unless you can see them as they leave my headquarters with "Tickletoes." They are not only happy because they now have "Tickletoes" for a playmate, but because they got their dolly long before Christmas.

Yes, the rush is on in earnest. From now on I will be deluged with requests for my wonder "Tickletoes," but fortunately I have plenty of my big, lovely dollies on hand, and no little girl who will do what I ask her to will be disappointed.

The doll makers are still busy day and night turning out these beautiful "Tickletoes" dollies, and it looks as though these wonder doll makers will have to keep busy 24 hours a day right up to Christmas Eve.

"Tickletoes" isn't just an ordinary doll—she's a DIFFERENT doll. In the first place she's a BIG doll—nearly 26 inches tall. She's about as tall as this newspaper page is long. She's always smiling and her eyes are always twinkling. Yes, she can close her eyes and go to sleep.

"Tickletoes" is unbreakable because she has rubber arms and legs and you can bend them just like a real baby's legs bend. "Tickletoes" has lovely hair—some are blondes, some are brunettes, and some are jet black. She has three distinct voices, is gorgeously dressed in organdy, with the little stockings and slippers to match. You'll fall in love with "Tickletoes" the minute you see her.

Here are the names of some of the little girls who have written to me asking how they can get my wonder doll "Tickletoes:"

Virginia Kovatch, Mildred Meiss, Irene Andrey, Adelina Lasek, Mary Hoff, Marie Parsbough, Mary Knauff, Eileen McGovern, Mary Ruffner, Virginia Wilczynski, Mary Chittoker, Mildred Sharmin, Marie McGrath, Bernice Garner, Loise Wingard and Rose Caruso.

The fact that hundreds of little girls have already secured their "Tickletoes" proves that this dolly is not really hard to get. Any little girl who wants "Tickletoes" before Christmas can learn how to get her by sending the Doll Lady coupon to me. When I get it, I'll send you a letter telling you just what you have to do. Goodby for today—the

"THE STORE OF PRACTICAL CHRISTMAS GIFTS"

SEALS REDUCE TUBERCULOSIS

A decline in the tuberculosis rate in Pittsburgh of 45 per cent since 1917 is the record to which the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh is pointing as it launches the sale of 1930 Christmas Seals.

In 1907, its records show, 178.5 persons out of every 100,000 died from tuberculosis. In the United States. In 1929, however, only 76 of every 100,000 persons died of this disease.

Authorities have said that tuberculosis infection usually occurs in childhood. Open air schools, medical inspection, school nursing service and health education provided by the Tuberculosis League, have effected a marked decrease in child infection and mortality, according to the league, which points to a decline of 63 per cent in child tubercular mortality.

With these statistics as evidence of what has already been done and the work's effectiveness, the league claims, Pittsburghers can be sure that their contributions by purchase of Christmas Seals will do a maximum of good.

FOREIGN CLINIC AID ASKED

Appeals for the child feeding program of Porto Rico and the child clinics of China were made to residents of the Pittsburgh district today. Checks in behalf of the Porto Rican child welfare committee should be sent to Malcolm McGiffin, treasurer for this district, who is president of the Fidelity Trust Company.

Mrs. John Aldan Dougherty, managing director of the China Child Welfare, Inc., who recently was in China, made an appeal for the benefit of the poor of China, explaining that 1,500 children of Shanghai had been treated in one month in the two clinics in that city.

Mrs. Dougherty

John W. Chalfant, Colonial Trust Company, is the local treasurer, and checks should be made payable to "Golden Rule Foundation."

Pitt Y to Tour Social Agencies

A tour of Pittsburgh social agencies will be conducted by the University of Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. for Pitt students Saturday. The expedition will leave State Hall at 9 a. m., visiting the Improvement of the Poor, Social Service Exchange, Hill district slums, Irene Kaufmann Settlement, Salvation Army and the Helping Hand.

Beta Tau Chapter Granted at Pitt

Zeta Beta Tau, national social fraternity with 32 chapters at leading universities in the country, have granted a charter to Beta Tau, local fraternity at the University of Pittsburgh. A formal installation of the new chapter will be held in the near future.

Takes Wooden Leg, Sells It for Gasoline

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A pal who steals your car merits no praise. But how can you describe him when he takes your wooden leg and sells it to buy gasoline.

This is the problem of Orrie Van Helden, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who appealed for redress to police.

A check of his story showed, police said, that his friend, Clifford MacDonald, sold the leg in Ladysmith, Va., for a dollar's worth of gasoline.

BIRTH CONTROL PLANS STUDIED

The Birth Control League of Allegheny County will hold a luncheon meeting in Kaufmann's, December 12, to discuss plans for future activities. The Rev. Edward Bleakney and Dr. H. C. Westervelt, president of the league, will make the addresses.

Plans now being outlined call for a move to repeal the Pennsylvania statute prohibiting dissemination of birth control information, organization of a maternal health center and an educational campaign, according to Mrs. Ruth Day Ealine, executive secretary of the league.

Group meetings of the league are to be held in Sewickley, Bellevue, South Hills, East End and elsewhere.

The ultimate aim of the local organization is said to be the establishment of health centers here. There the physicians would decide to whom birth control information should or should not be issued. Interest and knowledge of birth control and eugenic principles will be promoted.

MORE PRAISE FOR KONJOLA

Three In Family Find Relief From Ailments Through Use of Modern Medicine.

Konjola has become a household word in tens of thousands of homes simply because this modern medicine of 32 ingredients has won amazing victories over ills of young and old alike. Konjola is, indeed, a family medicine.

MRS. MARIE DEGARMO

Consider, for instance, what Konjola did for Mrs. Marie DeGarmo, her husband, and her mother-in-law. The DeGarmos live at 410 West North Avenue, Pittsburgh, and just recently Mrs. DeGarmo made the following statement:

"My husband, Ross DeGarmo, suffered from stomach trouble for fifteen years, and my mother-in-law was in a general rundown, weakened condition, while I was a victim of nervousness. My husband was first to try Konjola, and this fine medicine so completely ended his stomach ailments that both my mother-in-law and I began using Konjola. Six bottles of Konjola did wonders for mother. A few days ago she told me that she felt 20 years younger. Konjola quickly quieted my nerves. We all three praise Konjola every chance we get."

After all, it is what a medicine actually does that counts, and Konjola can be depended upon for results.

Konjola is sold in Pittsburgh at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street; by all Dow stores, and by leading druggists everywhere.

BUS LINE ASKED AT MONACA

James F. Mitchell, of Monaca, appeared before Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission, yesterday and asked for a certificate to operate a bus line between Monaca, Josephtown and Colona. According to Mitchell, the 88. Joseph Lead Company, of 88. Joseph, Mo., is erecting a $3,000,000 plant in Josephtown and the majority of employes of the new plant will live in Monaca. He said the fare between the points would be from 5 to 20 cents.

Mitchell also told the examiner that it was the intention of the Beaver Valley Transit Company to abandon the line between Monaca and Rochester. He said he would appear before the commission at a future date to ask permission to operate a bus line between those points.

CITY FUND SAFEGUARD UP TO COUNCIL

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Roy Long, the restaurant man, believes in coincidences. A few days ago a gentleman who was celebrating the tenth anniversary of the birth of speakeasies tiptoed into Long's shop, dropped into a chair and announced:

"Thash purty good music, waiter."

"Yes, sir," Long agreed. "Is there anything special you'd like the orchestra to play?"

"'Prisoner's Song,'" the guest requested.

"Give us the 'Prisoner Song'," Long barked to a mythical orchestra.

Two seconds later the radio poured forth "The Prisoner's Song."

A letter from our old friend, Jack (Fuzzie) Miller, the local song writer:

"Hello Pal:

"Hope you haven't forgotten me. My Yo-Yo number is finally coming to life and is going over big—out of town.

"Am just about ready to release a new number entitled, 'Sleepy Little Kiddy Heads.' All my copyrights are safely turked away in my strong box.

"I expect to have those Broadway publishers down on their knees, begging me for my numbers, some of these days.

"I've got 50 numbers written, each and every one original in words, title and music.

"And I'd like for you to tell the world for me that East Liberty has a Tin Pan Alley all its own.

"JACK FUZZIE MILLER.

"P. S.—And you can also let the world know that I hustled papers for years during the days that Tommy Dalzell had the Allegheny agency, and his little racing pony used to shoot us across the old Sixth Street Bridge with baseball extras to old Expo Park. Barney McKenna was magistrate then, and he was one of my customers."

The new telephone books will be out pretty soon, but the old ones are good enough for us old-fashioned people, especially the classified section where you learn that only one company is listed under "SALAD OIL." However, no more is listed under "RERAILERS" and under "REINFORCING BARS FOR CONCRETE," there is this direction: "See Steel Bars."

You can use the telephone book for a nice, clean game some night by asking somebody to determine on which page the "Reick-McJunkin Dairy Company" is listed. The first somebody will report Page 377. Then you ask somebody else to find out on which page the "Rieck-McJunkin Dairy Company" is listed, and the somebody else reports Page 382.

This starts a young riot, which ends, in case you live in the East End, in the East End Police Station. And that is where you step up to the desk sergeant and explain that both somebodies are correct, that the dairy company is listed on both pages because in one case it's spelled "Reick" and in the other "Rieck," probably as an accommodation to uncertain spellers. The correct spelling is "Rieck."

Also listed under two different spellings is a prominent physician, presumably because his name is one which, in pronunciation, lends itself to two spellings. We'd print the physican's name if we weren't afraid to disturb the ethics of the medical profession, which is dead-set against publicity.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

See by the papers that the State of New York doesn't recognize Reno divorces. What a complicated social upheaval that will cause. Have to give up the present wife and take in the old one again, and the present one will also have to go back where she made her previous stand. The hard part for some of 'em is going to be to remember who they were divorced from last. And it does away with all alimony. There's another economic blow to the country—and Reno. They will turn that town into a sheep ranch if this is so.

Yours, WILL.

City Rallies to Aid Toy Mission

SANTA CLAUS NEEDS MORE HELPERS

Founder Ill, Will Supervise Repairs to Playthings; Many Donations Reported

The Toy Mission Santa Claus will have many helpers this year. Men and women from all walks of life have rallied to the assistance of George L. Bond, founder of the mission, who for many years has turned sorrow into Yuletide joy for thousands upon thousands of needy boys and girls.

Mr. Bond, with a business associate, founded the mission 36 years ago, and carried on year after year. Last January he suffered a serious breakdown in his health. Until a few weeks ago he was confined to his home almost continually.

WILL SUPERVISE WORK

His health today will not permit him to devote the time and energy he has put into the work in the past and friends, new and old, have offered their help. This year he will only supervise. He plans to spend a few hours each day in the mission headquarters at 414 Penn avenue, but he must rely on the help of men and women who have rallied to his call for aid.

Already donations have begun to come in. Those who have neither toys nor money to give are anxious to give time and effort. There are toys to be repaired—dolls to patch up and dress; bicycles, wagons and scooters to be fixed up and shined up and a thousand and one things to do in the few short weeks between now and Christmas.

NEED GREATER NOW

Last year the mission provided gifts for nearly 17,000 children. This year, there are almost twice that number in need, according to Mr. Bond, who points to the distress due to unemployment as the cause. He says:

"Even though my health will not permit me to go into this work with all the vim and vigor of last year and the years before, I cannot remain in idleness when I realize that there are so many poor children facing disappointment."

The collection of toys began last week. Donations are received at the Mission headquarters, 414 Penn avenue, and volunteer workers already are sorting and preparing the gifts which will bring happiness to childhood.

ACTION MAY BRING CUT IN TAXES

Committee Approves Bank Bond Proposal Releasing $500,000 Municipal Cash

Another step toward a slight reduction in city taxes probably will be taken late today by Council.

This will be the passage of the ordinance requiring banks receiving city funds to deposit bonds to safeguard the money. This ordinance will release a $500,000 fund held by the city to guarantee its own deposits.

The ordinance, introduced at the request of City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, was unanimously affirmed by the Finance Committee of Council yesterday after several technical amendments were made.

BOND PLAN CHANGED

The chief amendment changed the bonds to be accepted by the city as security. As originally drawn the ordinance required city, state, county or United States government bonds. The amendment permits acceptance by the city of bonds of political subdivisions of Pennsylvania approved by the Secretary of Internal Affairs and corporate bonds, at 75 per cent of their market value, approved by the Clearing House Committee. City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt said:

"We feel this security is gilt-edged. This ordinance provides that security be given for our money. The former ordinance provided that the city insure its own funds."

PROTECTION INADEQUATE

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley some time ago pointed out that the $500,000 of the city's own funds set aside to insure the city's money is entirely inadequate to protect deposits that range from $10,000,000 to $40,000,000. Designed primarily to secure the city's funds in the same manner the state, county and school board insure their funds, the release of the $500,000 to the general fund may permit a reduction in city taxes, possibly one-quarter of a mill. The present levy is 26 mills on land and 13 on buildings.

The depository ordinance will be the subject of discussion at a special meeting this afternoon originally scheduled for tomorrow morning. Its passage without opposition is predicted.

Budget sessions, scheduled to start next week, are expected to be the briefest in a number of years. The tax levy will be fixed as quickly as possible, according to President of Council John S. Herron, and the budget cut to fit its cloth.

FUEL HUNTERS RAZE HOUSE

Near-zero weather has brought a new kind of a tragedy. Even the houses are being severed from their foundations to provide firewood for cold stoves.

A year ago there was a fire in an abandoned house, 100 Arlington avenue. The inside of the building was burned, but the shell of the house stood. All winter it withstood the icy blasts and last summer was still the eye-sore of the neighborhood.

Then winter came a few weeks ago. Persons who lived near were hungry and, worse than that, they were cold. Coal, gas and wood cost money and they didn't have any to spare. It was then that the old house was of some use. Men and boys tore the rotting wood out of the foundation and carried it away to warm their homes.

The miracle of it all is that the house is still standing, tottering treacherously on a bluff overlooking Arlington avenue. It is held by a frail brick wall under the back and a few posts that the wood-hunters have deemed wise to allow to remain there.

Dedicate Junior High School on Friday

J. C. Werner, superintendent of schools of Coraopolis, will be the principal speaker at ceremonies dedicating the new Neville Township Junior High School Friday. Other speakers will be business men from the Neville Island district.

Jury Service Urged for Jobless

Jury service for the unemployed, wherever possible, was recommended by Presiding Judge George V. Moore today. He asked the jury commissioners to prepare a list from which 20 or 30 unemployed might be drawn, to take the places of those seeking to be excused from service. The method of drawing jurors is fixed by law, but Judge Moore believed that by March a number of unemployed could be included in the venire.

TEACHER GETS DIVORCE

Mrs. Jennie A. Powell, of Florence avenue, Avalon, teacher of beauty culture, had to call a policeman to prevent her husband, Louis B. Powell, of the North Side, an industrial policeman, from wrecking their household, according to her testimony in Common Pleas Court. She was granted a divorce by Judge Elder W. Marshall. This happened in March last, just before their separation, when Powell started to break their furniture, she said.

He once put her out of their home in the middle of the night and threw her clothes after her and on another occasion pointed a revolver at her and threatened to shoot, she testified. They were married in November, 1916.

END OF LEPROSY IN U. S. SEEN

A prophecy that within a very short period of time it will be possible to eliminate leprosy entirely from the United States was made by William M. Danner, general secretary of the American Mission to Lepers, at the Shriné Luncheon Club meeting in the William Penn Hotel yesterday. He reported that the mission, in co-operation with various foreign governments, has improved the living conditions of the lepers at 150 stations in 40 countries and, by providing medical treatment, has greatly relieved their sufferings.

Danner was to speak at the Legion Luncheon Club meeting today. A local auxiliary of the American Mission to Lepers has been maintained for many years, and this year a special Christmas appeal is made for leper relief under the direction of Robert Wardrop at the First National Bank.

POSTHUMOUS PORTRAIT

"COL. OLIVER S. HERSHMAN," BY ERNEST LUDVIG IPSEN

Ipsen Paints Portrait of Col. Hershman

A portrait of the late Col. Oliver S. Hershman, has been completed by Ernest Ludvig Ipsen. The New York and Massachusetts painter whose portraits of distinguished people hang in many American galleries, is particularly known for his paintings of men. The painting is on display at Wunderleys.

Col. Hershman, former publisher of the Pittsburgh Press and before that of the Evening Telegraph, which he merged with the Chronicle to make the old Chronicle-Telegraph, died last July. He was a native Pittsburgher, who, starting as an office boy, succeeded in amassing a fortune and becoming a leading figure in the newspaper business.

With the Civil War claiming his father's life, Col Hershman found himself fatherless at 4. He attended the city schools and when 14 started to work for the Evening Telegraph. He served in various capacities, later becoming advertising manager and finally publisher.

He served on the military staffs of Govs. Edwin S. Stuart and John K. Tener.

Ipsen, the artist, was born in Massachusetts and maintains studios in both New York and West Dartmouth, Mass. He has painted, among others, Elihu Root, Dr. Maurice Francis Egan, diplomat, the picture being a present to the King and Queen of Denmark; the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft, and Dr Henry van Dyke. He has won prizes from the National Arts Club and other painting organizations.

PLEA ISSUED FOR TOYS

A plea for old or new toys to be distributed among needy families has been issued by the Dormont and Mt. Lebanon League of Women Voters. The toys are wanted for families who have been aided in the League's charitable work, recently, according to Mrs. R. L. Ehmann, president. Any toys not needed by League cases will be turned over to the Pittsburgh Toy Mission, she promises.

In connection with the work of collecting toys for Christmas distribution to the poor, Mrs. Ehmann points out that the League's work is obtaining food, clothing and jobs for the unemployed.

Merchant Hotel Workers Exonerated

Employes of the Merchants Hotel, 439 Water street, had no connection with the alleged sale of liquor to unemployed men who frequent Water street, A. Sogg, manager of the hotel stated yesterday. A man arrested for such sales and who was identified as a bootblack in the hotel was employed by a tenant in the hotel building, but had no connection with the hotel proper.

PROHIBITION, BLUE LAWS UPHELD BY REFORM GROUPS

NATIONAL BODY ENDS SESSION IN CITY

'Nullification' of Dry Measure Protested by Delegates; 'Dope' Scored

Members of the National Reform Association today were returning to their homes, prepared for another year's struggle for prohibition and the blue laws, and against Mormonism and increasing crime.

Declaring the blue laws of 1794 are reasonable and efficient, that they do not infringe upon the rights of any citizen, that only promoters of commercialized amusements object to them, the association stated its firm opposition to any weakening of the laws.

NULLIFICATION SCORED

Upholding President Hoover in his enforcement program, the association deplored alleged efforts to nullify the Eighteenth Amendment. It declared nullification is disloyalty to the constitution and referenda an illegal and un-American method of aiming at repeal.

Advocating education of school children in the effect of narcotic drugs and alcohol upon the human body, the association called upon all persons to "lift the nation above the slavery of appetite."

URGE HOME PROTECTION

On general morals and manners, the association had this to say:

"We urge that the home, the fortress of our American civilization, be protected against the propaganda of the Mormon (Latter Day Saints) missionaries; that the divorce laws be made to conform to God's laws; that Communism and its dangers to the home receive the attention of all church groups; that we safeguard the children and the home by teaching obedience to all the laws and restrictions of the home in order that there may arise a law-abiding citizenry."

DISCLAIMER REJECTED

The association rejected as unnecessary a motion to disclaim official sympathy with the Rev. Dr. A. R. Robinson's attack on Dr. Clarence True Wilson, director of the Methodist Board of Temperance and Morals, at the Monday evening banquet. Dr. Robinson expressed the opinion that Dr. Wilson's attack on Prohibition Director Woodcock's department, declaring it honeycombed with anti-dry sympathizers, was ill-advised and without basis of fact.

Before adjourning, the association elected Dr. E. A. Crooks, W. J. Aiken, Charles N. Hanna, Dr. T. D. Edgar, Rev. R. W. Redpath, Dr. Ella M. George, Dr. G. E. Brenneman and Dr. W. W. T Duncan to the board.

An overcoat valued at $40 was stolen from Samuel E. Eliot, of 1402 Columbus avenue, while he was attending a supper in the basement of the North Side Unitarian Church, at West North avenue and Resaca place, last night. A shabbily dressed stranger suspected of the theft left his old and dirty one in its place.

FIXING SHOES AT HELPING HAND

A new department, a shoe repair section, was functioning today at the Helping Hand, Water street, where 1,500 unemployed men are sheltered and fed each day. A. Rese, a teacher at the Western Penitentiary, instructed the men in the repair of shoes yesterday.

The new department was instituted to carry out the idea behind the movement—to enable the men to help themselves, and to work for themselves, so that they may not feel that they are living on charity.

Several washing machines also have been procured so the men may be able to wash their clothing.

Huge kettles for preparing soup, and two large boilers for making coffee, have been added.

The dormitories in the upper floors of the building are being rapidly filled with almost a thousand single and double decker cots.

Showers have been set up, and an emergency hospital has been outfitted.

Fifteen doctors and as many nurses from various hospitals last night vaccinated the men sheltered by the organization. This action was taken after officers of the association learned that smallpox had appeared in scattered sections of the country.

Morning Ceremony

The bride wore a gown of eggshell satin, princess mode, with a tulle veil draped from a cap of tulle caught with orange blossoms. She carried a sheaf of calla lilies. Her sister, Miss Mildred Battung, as maid of honor, wore Hollywood blue satin with a cloth-of-silver hat, and the bridesmaid, Miss Beatrice Ann Kunzman, wore nile green satin. Both carried autumn flowers. Ralph Holzer served as the best man.

There was a wedding breakfast in the home of the bride's parents for the bridal party and the families. In the evening there was a dinner and reception for 100 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds are at home in Carrick.

A most enjoyable concert was given before the Tuesday Musical Club by the Club Chorale yesterday afternoon in Memorial Hall. Dr. Charles N. Boyd directed and Elsie Breese Mitchell was at the piano. The choral this year is very well balanced, the voices have good tone quality, the strength and beauty of the alto and second soprano sections being especially noticeable. The choral was assisted by two guest soloists from the Morgantown Music Club, Mary Williams, soprano, and Frances Saunders, pianist, who pleased the large audience. Mrs. Frank Myer, contralto, had a solo part in one choral number, and "Maid of the Mist," by Cadman, featured C. Warren Kinder in the lilting tenor.

Greetings from Mrs. George H. Wilson, former assistant secretary, were raid. At the tea tables were Mrs. A. P. James, Miss Eda Gregg McCoy, Mrs. Charles Stone, Mrs. W. B. Hartley, Mrs. John H. Laur, Mrs. J. B. Steele, Mrs. T. W. Noonan and Miss Anna Whitten.

COSTUMES OF RED BRIGHTEN WINTER DAYS AND EVENINGS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 3.—We are still seeing red here, but nobody seems to be angry about it. The red tones and shades were not so popular a few months ago, right after summer. But now one sees plenty of red at evening functions, and many women like red frocks under their more sombre-hued winter coats. The extremely bright reds don't seem to show themselves just now, we seem to prefer a more subhued tone. Wine reds are much liked and are seen at both day and evening functions. Vionnet is using much raspberry red, from dark to quite pale and tomato red is also coming in for a little dressing. Something very new this season. Red is being used in woolen frocks, and you will find that a red frock of light woolen will add a welcome dash of color on the drabbest day. The wine reds with brown fur are much in the picture, and several red frocks ally themselves with a touch of silver to make their way bright. The red frock should always be of very good quality, an inexpensive frock for outfit of red is crude and instead of creating a cheerful effect gives a sad and somewhat bedraggled look to the wearer.

VIONNET HAS BEEN playing red heavily this season and she has used tomato red for the tailored frock here shown which is of fine, soft, lightweight woolen. The gilet and soft bow are of crepe de Chine in a matching shade of red. The belt is narrow and fastens with a large silver clasp. Very wide circular insets at either side of the skirt give a gracefully flaring silhouette.

* * *

VERY SIMPLE and therefore exceedingly smart is the afternoon frock from Molyneux's new collection. Heavy crepe de Chine is used and cut most cleverly to give a svelte line with the utmost simplicity. Fan-shaped insets that are pleated give width to the straight skirt and narrow sleeves. The bodice is softly clinging and dips in a point at the front.

COURT QUERIES GAS RAISE

The Public Service Commission today was asked by the Superior Court to give more information concerning a gas rate raise it granted five years ago.

In 1925, the Borough of Johnsonburg, Elk County, protested a proposed raise in the price of gas made by the Consumers Gas and Heating Company, the Midland Gas Company and the Hanley & Bird, from 45 cents to 65 cents per 1,000 feet. The raise was approved by the Public Service Commission and the borough appealed to the Superior Court, which has asked the commission for additional facts. Commissioners Samuel Walker heard the court's request.

STUDENT FILES APPEAL

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Dec. 3.—(INS.)—Christian Z. Schove, 23, Harvard University law student, of Pittsburgh, has appealed from the sentence of three months and $50 imposed upon him by District Court Judge Edward A. Counihan, as the result of an alleged wild drive on November 19, in which Schove was said to have struck another automobile.

Information of the appeal action had not been received here today by Schove's mother, Mrs. W. H. Boggs of 65 Riverview avenue. Mrs. Boggs said her son's automobile was sideswiped in a collision, according to information received from Cambridge.

COURT ACTION UNLIKELY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Senate leaders see no chance for disposition of the controversial League Court issue at this session as they await the protocol from President Hoover.

Negotiations are under way looking to a postponement of the question by the foreign relations committee until a year hence, although Chairman Borah has said he would refuse to accept responsibility for such a delay.

Senator Watson, Republican leader, said today:

"I most certainly am opposed to injecting the World Court into this short session.

"Above all else, I want to dispose of the emergency domestic problems confronting us and do this without the necessity of an extra session in the spring. We can't complete that program and take up the World Court, too."

Senators Robinson, the Democratic leader, and Swanson, of Virginia, ranking Democrat on the Foreign Relations Committee, likewise say they see little opportunity for action on the World Court at this session. Swanson favors its postponement.

FLAMES SWEEP FINEVIEW HOME

Mrs. H. M. Ashworth, 73, and her son, Robert J., 51, were routed this morning as fire swept through their home, 1617 Myler avenue, Fineview. Damage was estimated at $2,500.

The fire started in the pantry as Mrs. Ashworth was in the kitchen preparing breakfast. Her son was asleep on the second floor. The alarm was sounded by neighbors, who saw smoke pouring from the dwelling.

The fire gained headway when the hook and ladder truck of No. 50 Ervine Company broke down en route to the scene. An emergency alarm was sounded for No. 46 Ervine Company. The patrol from North Side Station, unable to climb Henderson street, arrived at the fire a half-hour late.

Does your child catch Cold easily?

Children who catch cold easily, who have sore throat or tonsilitis, are usually in a weakened, run-down condition.

Because they do not secure from their food the vitamins necessary for growth, they become weak, thin and pale, they cannot hold their own at school or play, they tire easily and do not have the strength to resist disease.

If your child is facing the winter in a half-sick, run-down condition, start with Father John's Medicine at once. Countless mothers have proved its merit. 184 hospitals and institutions use it regularly.

Father John's Medicine is a combination of cod liver oil with other valuable ingredients that brings to your child the vitamins so necessary for growth and strength. Because of its scientific preparation it is easily assimilated by even the most delicate stomach. Children thrive on it amazingly.

You will be surprised how your child will pick right up. Pale cheeks glow with health and strength. Hollows fill out. Weight is added. Bones become strong, muscles hard. The child becomes vigorous and healthy.

Father John's Medicine is a simple food medicine that contains neither drugs nor alcohol. It could not harm even an infant. Just ask your druggist.

TELL IT TO SALLY

Will Love Fade If Hubby Is Younger Than Wife?

Or can she be positive sure that he will settle down and never look at another girl?

And Pa 'n' Ma 'n' Aunt Lizzie 'n' Uncle Bob 'n' all his folks are ditchford with the [illegible] maybe . . .

But a [illegible] only to [illegible] Ruth, is [illegible]

What's she to do?

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I have been going with the boy I love for three years now, and I thought he was just about perfect. Now, however, I see [illegible] and I [illegible] ready to settle down [illegible] human for all of us to have "silly spells." And [illegible] not confined to any age. You'll find them at all ages.

If you're looking for a foolproof husband . . . you'd better stay an old maid.

Of course he'll admire you [illegible] and intelligence warrant, he finds them all his life. And if you're wise, you'll help him admire them. Poor such admiration is good for both of you. It'll keep both of you young and interesting.

And it will be up to you to keep yourself so stimulating and alluring that other interests cannot draw him from your side.

Age Doesn't Matter

Many women overlook this side of marriage. They think that when the vows are said the struggle is over, and they proceed to sit back and take things easy. If, some 10 or 20 years hence, Friend Husband proceeds to walk on them, they immediately blame it on their years . . . or on some vamp. As a matter of fact, nine times out of ten, it's their own fault.

They've lost their jobs and their men because they didn't work enough to hold them.

If the average office worker allowed herself to become as stupid and silly and slack as many wives allow themselves to become, she'd be fired within a month.

Marriage is a job like any other, Ruth. Age will play a very little part in it. But understanding and humor and tolerance and gumption play an enormous part. If you'll use them . . . and keep on using them . . . you'll win out whatever age you are.

"We are planning to marry next year if it is financially possible. But that year's difference scares me terribly. He has had his fling, too, sort of, but I can't get it out of my brain that he is not ready to settle down.

"Can you advise me? I wouldn't mention it to him for the world, as he'd think me very [illegible] and unjustly suspicious.

"WORRIED RUTH.

Can I advise you?

Sure I can. Little suitor, snap out of it and stop fussing [illegible].

Can you be positively sure that Prince Charming will settle down and never look at another girl?

Of course you can't, my dear. What are you looking for, anyway, a hundred [illegible] or a [illegible]?

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Unattractive Skin a Blight of Youth

One of youth's greatest blessings is a clear, clean skin. My heart goes out to boys and girls, young men and women, who have pimples, red patches and unattractive complexion.

DR COPELAND

The most common of skin complaints is known as acne. This takes several forms—blackheads, bumps, lumps, yellow capped pimples, etc. The face, back and upper part of the chest, are favorite places of attack.

One sad thing about the ailment is that it may leave pits and scars. While in most instances it is a mere passing disfigurement, an aggravated case may permanently damage and mar the face.

Many a girl, with really perfect features, has been made unhappy for life, first by the acute stages of the trouble, and then by the permanent scars. It is to avoid all this that I am writing today.

By the way, if what I say is not entirely clear to you, or you feel your trouble is not exactly what I am describing today, don't hesitate to write me. The editor of this paper will send me your letter, and I shall be only too pleased to answer your question. If I can make life happier for a young person—or an old one—that adds to my joy.

Among the fundamental causes of acne are four outstanding factors. In girls the possibility of some disturbance of the pelvic organs must be considered. Digestive disturbances, due, perhaps, to wrong eating, are quite commonly observed in all skin troubles.

The presence of some "focal infection," in teeth or tonsils is another factor of great importance. Lastly, improper cleansing of the skin is a thing that must never be overlooked as a cause.

Since space does not permit full discussion today of all these matters, I shall speak of but one, the last one. I do so because I am more and more impressed that the average person really neglects the skin.

We hurry through life, and, because we think we have no time for this and that duty, we skimp in many things. One of these oversights relates to the skin. You will, perhaps, be shocked to be told this, but, perhaps it applies to you.

Soap and water, a wash-cloth and "elbow grease" must be abundantly applied to the face if it is to be kept really clean. It is not enough to wash the face once a day, particularly if the skin is inclined to "break out." Several scrubbings, especially the morning and night bathings, must be really vigorous ones.

If a girl uses powder and rouge she should never go to bed without getting off every bit of foreign substance. After repeated applications of soap and water, she may then apply a bit of cold cream, if she wishes. But, first, make sure the skin is perfectly clean.

I shall tell you more about the skin very soon.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Want a formula of a beauty bracer after a tired day before the festivities of the merry evening? Here 'tis: Cold cream the face, take a hot, soapy bath, removing the cold cream in the tub. Use a bath brush; scouring the skin surface stimulates circulation, so that the blood streams will be urged to carry away fatigue bugs. Finish with a cold shower. Place pads of cotton that have been dipped in witch hazel over the eyes and lie still in bed for half an hour. Play you are a log in a dark forest. The idea is to make the body feel heavy; then it relaxes.

Orange juice and milk are the great little old tooth preservers. Everyone should have plenty of both, for the sake of their pearls. Vitamin C has hidden within its elements certain mysterious powers that manufacture tooth materials. This vitamin is found in fresh fruits, green salads, and in eggs. Bimeby we shall find out just what foods make hair grow good and plenty. Maybe the baldheads will have to eat their spinach and finish up their cereals at breakfast. They'd do anything that is guaranteed to grow wool atop the massive mind. Poor little things.

If You're Going to Marry, Do It Early, Says Fay King, Telling Why

By FAY KING

The longer a girl puts off marrying, the more her choice narrows.

From 18 to 22 her chances are best. She is then at her loveliest. All the young women are eligible.

If she falls in love with the right young man, her marriage is sure to be a success. If she makes a wrong marriage, her chances for a second happier one are still good.

If she waits until her late twenties, most of the likely young men have married. She will also have the competition of young girls.

When she has reached 35 her choice is narrowed down to disappointed divorced men, widowers with children, or bachelors set in their ways and a bit grouchy.

If you intend marrying—marry young.

Madge Scores Over Edith

I never have wished for psychic power more fervently than I did in the fraction of a second during which Philip Veritzen gazed steadily at me after I had told him my reason for guarding Mary so closely. But my wish was vain, for when he answered my statement that it was a "romantic story," there was nothing in his face, eyes or manner to show that he read any meaning into my words that I, myself, was on the subject. So he did not hesitate to show his annoyance.

"It must be romantic," he said dryly, "to make such precautions necessary. We must bow to your will, of course, but I think Miss Fairfax and I have distinct cause for libel suits, don't you, Miss Fairfax?"

Edith laughed, but there was venom in her mirth.

"Not considered respectable enough for chaperones!" she said lightly. "Will that be our headline? I shan't soon forgive you, Madge. That stuff about being too young and pretty, is not even good apple sauce, it isn't cooked enough."

"Don't moan too much, dear heart!" Dicky admonished her, "for you couldn't have gone anyway. That Beaufort thing comes up tomorrow morning and I'm completely at sea for I haven't been attending to the thing. So you'll have to keep your pretty nose to the grindstone tomorrow."

"While you stroll down old Broadway, I suppose," she shot back, and there was a nagging note in her voice which annoyed me absurdly. I have always detested the term "office wife," but it seemed to me suddenly that no other fitted Edith. The scolding tone and words were suggestive of so much more intimate companionship than the meaningless endearments which both had used in my hearing during the evening. But I reflected, with a grim little distaste for the times in which I lived, "darling" and "dearest" and "sweetheart" and "dear heart" and "love" were used so universally by people almost strangers to each other, that one could judge nothing of the relationship of the speakers.

There was irritation in Dicky's voice as he answered, though his words were airly nonchalant.

"Rather, run down it, sweetie," he replied. "I expect to be kept rather busy tomorrow. My frau is slinging a party for our niece, I believe, either tomorrow night or the next one, and uncle dear, is scheduled to run errands, or so I have been informed."

He did not look toward me as he spoke, something for which I was supremely thankful, for I am afraid my face was registering astonishment so plainly that he could not help but see it. Who ever would have supposed that he would react in this way to the discovery that I was guest of honor at Philip Veritzen's dinner party? That he had been furiously angry when he first saw me, I was as sure as I was that he was chagrined to have me see Edith Fairfax with him, and know that he had gone to see her as soon as he rushed up from the farm. I had expected temper, recriminations, lofty ignoring of me, possible refusal to have anything to do with Mary's party. But this public flouting of Edith, and her wish for her holiday puzzled me as much as did the air of conjugal obedience with which he subtly had invested his declaration.

The next instant I understood. Edith had drawn the reins a bit too tightly, and restive Dicky, always shying at the slightest hint of restraint, had bolted. But even the knowledge that resentment against her instead of friendliness for me had been responsible for his little speech could not speed my relief—and my pleasure at Edith's discomfiture.

That she was having a struggle to keep from giving an exhibition of temper, I saw from a furtive glance at her. But she was helped unexpectedly by Philip Veritzen who diverted possible attention from her and from Dickey by directly addressing me.

"What is this 'party,' you are 'slinging' may I ask? Theatre? Dancing? Is there anything I can do? I should love to help. How about a box party for—" he named one of the season's successes which was one of his own productions. I had seen it as had the Underwoods, in our roles of Mr. Veritzen's representatives during his absence, but Mary had not, nor, I was sure, had any of the young people we were to entertain. I wondered how Dickey would react to the offer, for he had refused to make one of the party when Lillian, Harry and I attended the production, saying that he would buy his own seat if he wanted to go. But he could hardly refuse this munificent and gracious offer for Mary without appearing churlish, and his silence gave assent to my answer of "You are too kind, Mr. Veritzen. That is a wonderful offer."

"Nonsense!" he returned, smiling genially. "It is nothing. Just tell me how many seats you have—it does not matter how many, remember, and I will arrange for the seats, with an extra one or two for an unexpected guest or two. Or is your invitation list closed?"

An almost imperceptible movement of his eyebrows showed me, too late, the price he meant to exact for his generosity. He wished me to invite Colin Cameron to Mary's party!

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, December 4

An unusually eventful and interesting day is forecast from the powerful planetary configurations holding sway. There is a sign of a sudden and quite unforeseen development of the affairs of far-reaching results and of radical importance in shaping the future career. Change of business and environment are probable, with an enhancement of finances and position. These may be sought with enterprise and ambition, but be on guard against some small treachery or tribulation. The personal affiliations or undue indulgences should not be permitted to interfere.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of an eventful and revolutionary year, with great change and much success impending. Promotion, adventure and increase of wealth are imminent, but be on guard against duplicity and be careful not to let personal indulgence intervene or complicate unusual opportunities.

A child born on this day should be splendidly equipped for success and achievement of high aims in life, being skilful, original, inventive and adventurous. But a tendency to personal indulgence, or romantic projects may dominate, although it could also succeed in poetry, music or art, possibly of a spectacular nature.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Weddings Dramatic, But Not Theatrical

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I turn to you for a few suggestions. Are ring bearers still in vogue? A ring bearer carrying the ring in a lily seems a lovely idea. Is it in good taste?

2. What are the best colors for bridesmaids' dresses at this time of the year?

3. Is it well for the maid of honor to be dressed in white trimmed with pale colors?

E. C.

1. Ring bearers are not usual at weddings nowadays. And I, for one, am glad. They have always seemed to me a bit a great deal perhaps, theatrical. A wedding, a formal wedding, it is true, should be dramatically planned—its very quality, with the processional and recessional and music and all, is dramatic in its inclination—but it should veer away from the theatrical. The ring bearer, especially if she or he carries the ring in some sensational manner, takes too much attention from where it should be—on the bride.

2. Yellow is lovely at all times of the year for bridesmaids' dresses, and always forms a charming background for the bride's costume. Some shades of green are also delightful and also some shades of red.

3. This usually isn't very effective.

The Formal Acceptance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have been invited to a wedding. We want to write and accept the invitation, but do not know how to word the letter. In this same letter I want to tell them that my mother-in-law, brother-in-law, father-in-law and uncle are going to the wedding also. What shall I write? MRS K.

I take it that the invitation is a formal one, engraved and in the third person, and invites you not only to the marriage ceremony but also to the reception following. Each separate invitation should be separately acknowledged. That is, you acknowledge the one for you and your husband, and each of the other relatives that you mention makes his or her own acknowledgement.

This is a form of acknowledgement, written on the first page of a double-sheeted, plain letter paper:

Mr. and Mrs. John Kendall accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Gray's kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of December, at five o'clock.

Sleepless Nights

Caused by "NERVES"

Nothing destroys health and vitality quite so quickly as sleepless nights. And in most cases Sleeplessness is caused by Nervousness. You lie awake with every nerve "on edge"—your whole body tense.

Restful slumber comes only when your "NERVES" are quiet and relaxed. When you are tired and all upset . . . . why lie awake at night with "NERVES." Try this delightful Effervescent drink to quiet the "NERVES" and get sound, restful sleep.

Before you go to bed . . . . drop a Dr. Miles' Effervescent NERVINE Tablet into a glass of water. Watch it bubble up like sparkling spring water—then drink it. You will welcome the prompt way this harmless Effervescent drink quiets the nerves—relaxes the nervous tension and helps nature bring you relaxation and rest.

Mr. Frank Williams says:—

"I have been using Dr. Miles' Effervescent NERVINE Tablets and do not have any more nervous spells, and I go to bed knowing that when I close my eyes I will fall asleep."

Dr. Miles' NERVINE is made in two forms—Effervescent Tablets and the old, reliable Liquid form that druggists have sold for over 50 years. In the Effervescent Tablets the time-tested NERVINE formula is combined with bicarbonate of soda and citric acid. They tend to correct hyper-acidity—a frequent cause of nervousness. All druggists have both kinds. Small size 25c. Large size $1.00.

WALTER WINCHELL
On Broadway

Settlement

So take my hand and meet my steady eyes,
A soft sweet kiss and let us go our way;
Too long I've stumbled on—I'm sick of lies,
And recollections of a happier day;
I know there is no glamor left in me,
My vows are threadbare and my phrases old;
And nights that were alive with ecstasy,
Have vanished and the stars and moon are cold.

The play is over—ring the curtain down,
Why waste a tear for rapture strangely fled?
Our kingdom now is just a noisy town,
Our dreams are dust—our roses old and dead:

But I for one am certain that this fee
Is not too high to pay for ecstasy!

The Retort Swell

Any theatrical impresario will tell you that William Anthony McGuire, the playwright, just can't be bothered when he doesn't feel like keeping an appointment, or finishing a musical comedy book by the contracted time.

When Charles Dillingham recently announced in the rags that Mr. McGuire had contracted to write three plays for him, Ring Lardner telephoned to Dillingham:

"I see McGuire is going to write three shows for you, so reserve two seats down front for the first one, please."

"You know better than that," said Dillingham. "You know McGuire won't have the first show ready for a long time yet."

"I know, I know," said Ring. "I don't want them for myself. I want them in case I ever have any grandchildren."

Swifty

At the testimonial dinner to Daniel Frohman, Texas Guinan was among those to pay tribute to Mr. Frohman, who was celebrating his 50th year in theatricals:

"There are two great days in my life," Texas said emotionally, "the day I met Daniel Frohman—"

"And the day," interrupted a heckler, "that you saddled Paul Revere's horse!"

A Form of Criticism

At the same affair Channing Pollock, the playwright, who stopped liking critics several years ago, twitted the drama defenders in this manner:

"In all my life I only knew one person who liked a dramatic critic. That person was the critic's mother—and that was animal instinct."

In Fewer Words

It was also said that since times became so hard many a show-off has been forced to use his high hat as a waste basket.

Epitaph

Bert Hanlon was toasted and roasted at the Friars. Hanlon, who is described as the only Broadway clown who never repeats a crack once he has made it, concluded his modest talk with:

"I never had anything, never expect to have anything, and when I die, I hope they will put these few words on my tombstone: 'Bert Hanlon—Cleaned and Dyed.'"

Bravo, Bravo!

At Miss Guinan's place, particularly when a fourflusher comes in with a top hat and all the other evening dress outfit, and then has himself a time, and cannot pay the check (it happens nightly) the management refuses to give the phoney his hat and coat which he checked when he came in.

Then they wait 24 hours. If the bill hasn't been paid by then—Miss Guinan instructs the coatroom attendants to send the overcoats down to the breadliners, to either wear or peddle for what they can get.

Other night clubs please copy.

O Mr. Wilstach!

Suggested for Frank J. Wilstach's Simile Dictionary: William Fawcett's: Overworked as a parlor sofa before rumble seats were invented . . . Joseph Auslander's: A flash of thought like a banner unfurled . . . George Jean Nathan's: Pointed as a traffic policeman's finger, and harsh as straight whisky . . . The New Yorker's: Fabulous as the legend that Notre Dame's team is a gang of Irishmen . . . Bland Johansen's: As sweetly melancholy as a beer jug . . . and "Bugs" Baer's: She had a figure like a ferry boat. Sure as a cruller fits a cup of coffee . . . Her lips tightened up like brakes on a hill and, Einstein is as full of theories as an army mattress is of lumps.

As If You Didn't Know

About the only thing dry at the average banquet is the speech-making.

Add Sour Breaks

Solly Violinsky, one of Broadway's better known kidders, who deserted the Mean Stem for Melancholywood, hasn't had better luck out there, it appears After a long layoff, Solly, who is very proud, was induced to accept a small part in a gang film

His agent sold him the idea in this manner:

"You can play the part of Louie, the Louse, at $20 a day. It ought to last three weeks, at least. Take it, you dope!"

Solly agreed but two days later he was pensive again

"I thought you had a three-week job?" asked a heckler.

"I thought so, too," said Violinsky, "but they put me on the gang that got knocked off."

Atta Girl!

Take it from Bob Sisk, of the Theater Guild, an outerly lady Charlestoner up to the box office of that amusement temple and said:

"I'd like two seats for 'Elizabeth, the Queen,' but if there is any shooting in it, never mind. I simply can't stand shooting."

She was reminded that English history reveals that there was no shooting in those times.

"They just cut people's heads off," said the box officer.

"In that case," was the reply, "I'd like my seats as far down front as possible."

A Pish and Two Tushes

In his review of a new play by Robert Sherwood, the World's Vinegar Tree says in part:

"And the New York shown in this play . . . is the New York of love nests, bootleggers, cocktail party judges, 20th floor suicides, dope, tabloids and Walter Winchell — about whom Mr. Sherwood says some, but not all, of the things one would like to hear."

As if it all would fit in three acts.

Cut-Rate Stunt Men Arouse Ire of Professionals In Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 3.

Reversing the usual order of things, Hollywood's professional athletes are complaining about the invasion of amateurs.

One of the prominent motion picture stunt men charges that local aquatic stars are providing cut-rate thrills for film producers.

The ordinary water scenes, for which stunt men receive $25 a day, are being done by amateurs for $10 a day, he declares.

Another charge is that an amateur recently did a 94-foot dive for $15. The stunt would bring $250 to a professional, it is said.

Most of the stunt men in Hollywood have an understanding about prices. They may undercut each other, but the difference will not be a substantial amount.

If the asserted invasion of amateurs continues, stuntmen are threatening an exposure of the cut-rate chance takers.

A NARSTY CYNIC

A local writer witheringly observes:

"If a Hollywood film magnate bought 'The Apple Cart,' he'd substitute watermelons for production value."

BEAT THE CHILD

One of Hollywood's little tragedies took place today in front of the Fox studio.

A hopeful mother was leading her lamb across the street to interview a director.

Just as she stepped from the curb, the child slipped and fell into the muddy gutter.

Such language! And from a mother!

MARY ASTOR SIGNED

The girl in R-K-O's picture, "Private Secretary," will be played by Mary Astor, who continues her successful career in the talkies.

This story by Carey Wilson relates the ingratitude of a young salesman who was boosted by his secretary to a general-managership, and who then forgets all about her.

Mel Brown is to direct.

"Private Secretary" is only one of the business romances that are following in the wake of First National's very successful film, "The Office Wife."

MORE CASTING

Casting is about finished for John Gilbert's new film, "A Gentleman's Fate." John Miljan and George Marion are among the last names to be added. Incidentally, this department made an awful mistake about Anita Page playing a supporting role in the Ursula Parrott story. Her part is of equal importance to any other feminine role in the picture.

I NOTE THAT

A certain blonde star, with a reputation for being high-hat, recently compelled a fan magazine writer to get an interview with her secretary, while she devoted her attention to a book. Patsy Ruth Miller is coming for a free-time portrait sketch by the Rumanian artist, Negulesco.

Pat's husband, Jay Garnett, is up and about after his attack of influenza.

Ann Harding is becoming one of the film colony's most ardent aviation fans.

Penn Plans Juvenile Show Holiday Week

Victor Hyde, of Loew's New York production staff, who successfully staged and produced "The Greater Pittsburgh Follies" last summer, will have full supervision of the special Christmas week stage feature to be presented in the Penn, December 19 to 25. It will be known as "The Pittsburgh Juvenile Minstrel Follies." The entire cast, totaling approximately 150 children, will comprise Pittsburgh boys and girls, ranging in ages from 6 to 16. Applications are now being received at the Penn.

NOTES ABOUT STAGE PLAYS FOR MONDAY

"Sweet Adeline," a musical romance dealing with the Gay Nineties, will open a week's engagement in the Nixon Monday. Its heroine is a humble waitress who becomes a Broadway stage favorite. Helen Morgan and Irene Franklin are prominent in it.

A play of ancestors, in which the hero is plunged among them—they of one century and he of a much later one, is on anomoly one might say, but it is accomplished in "Berkeley Square," which comes to the Alvin Monday. Leslie Howard plays the hero who astonishes his ancestors and others in the time of Queen Anne in London, by his forecasts, quotations from the writing of authors of the twentieth century, and his modern views of life.

Catherine Chisholm Cushing, author of "Jerry," to be presented by the George Sharp Players in the Pitt next week, is a sister of Florence Chisholm Douglass of Ridgey street.

Harry (Hello Jake) Fields is the featured comic with "Sugar Babies," which opens in the Academy Sunday night with a midnight show.

LOVE LAUGHS At LADIES!

Connie Calvert was a young lady of spotless upbringing, engaged to a young gentleman of her own social circle. Then she met terse-spoken, steely-eyed Duke Garson, loved and feared by all the denizens of New York's tough Gangster Coast—no man, surely, for a refined young lady to know! But Connie, in a dramatic rush of events, found out how love could laugh at the barriers set up by convention and habit. She found out, incidentally, her own heart in

WALTER SAYS GROVE TOPS EARNSHAW

THE ATHLETICS AND Yankees stand out as barriers to Walter Johnson's American League flag aspirations, it was disclosed by the Senators' manager, who spent yesterday in Pittsburgh on business. One of the greatest pitchers baseball has produced and a man who is loved throughout the realm of the sport, Johnson has shown unmistakable signs of leadership in the two years he piloted the Washington club. The Senators were the surprise of the junior circuit this year; they heckled the Athletics all season and were actually in the flag fight right up to the last few weeks of the race.

Walter Johnson

"These Yankees are up to break out and gum up this race for the rest of us on account of their wonderful attack," mused Johnson as he discussed the next campaign. "Joe McCarthy will fall heir to some great hitters, but the proof of the pudding will be found in his pitching staff. If he can get some consistent pitching I expect the Yankees to be dangerous all season."

IT SEEMS [illegible] do not believe [illegible] club. "I have got [illegible] ments of the Philadelphia club," continued Walter. "The A's deserve everything they have won but did you ever run over the remainder of that club after eliminating Simmons, Cochrane, Foxx and Grove?

"Go over the rest of the team and you will realize the club is mediocre in the other spots. Simmons is so good few people seem to realize his worth, and Cochrane and Foxx are two other [illegible] Personally, I am certain that Lefty Grove is a [illegible] ler didn't have a lot of [illegible]

Joe Cronin

"BUT LEFTY WAS terribly touch on us—not only in the games which he started and finished, but in contests that saw him in the relief role. He was ready all the time. Of course, I was glad to see Earnshow come through like a big star in the battles with the Cardinals, and he really is a great slab artist, but Grove was clearly the better pitcher throughout the season."

Johnson apparently thinks the race will be among the two clubs mentioned and his own. Walter is a bit dubious about Joe Judge and Sam Rice, two gems of the Washington setting who have sparkled through the years, but he has a fine understudy for Judge in Joe Kuhel, Kansas City graduate. Walter is convinced that Kuhel is ready for the big show.

THE CELEBRATED CHARACTER of the diamond sport was anxious to pay a special tribute to Joe Cronin, former Pirate who proved one of the season's sensations as he performed in the shortfield for the Senators. "Joe surely arrived this year," said the big pilot of the club, as his faced beamed. "Cronins are hard to find. Aside from the brilliance you see in him, Joe has traits that add to his greatness. For example, we were fighting it out with Grove in Philadelphia. Grove was so fast that day that practically every member of the club went to the plate and came back in a mood that said, 'Well, he's just too good; we'll have to wait until tomorrow before we can get anywhere.' Cronin was one that did not share this feeling. When the going is tough he gets better, and on this occasion he broke loose with a homer and a double that won the ball game.

"ANOTHER PLEASING ANGLE to Joe is his willingness to listen to anyone who might have something to say that would help him. Often you see players who, when some more obscure person offers them a tip, will assume a superior air. Cronin is exactly the opposite.

"I have seen the bat boy make suggestions to Joe and he would listen attentively. His courage is one of his finest qualities. All year long certain pitchers threw at him, but this had no ill effect on him whatever. And, just to think, we entertained the idea of trading him before we gave him a chance!"

Honus Wagner

CRONIN'S UNUSUAL BATTING was largely the outgrowth of a change in his style, according to Johnson. Joe apparently took advantage of the same kind of tip which Fred Clarke gave Charley Grimm, soon after Grimm reached the majors. Cronin kept his bat out in front too long as the pitcher delivered the ball. The better position is to cock the bat, and this style Joe has put into operation.

Honus Wagner spent several hours of the day with Johnson, the two veterans swapping many pleasant yarns of the diamond before Johnson left the city last night. Walter took occasion to congratulate Wagner on his being chosen by Connie Mack as shortstop on the all-time all-America team picked by Mack, same being Connie's selections as the best players he has seen in his 50 years of baseball.

"YES, I SAW something about that," said Honus, "and it surely was nice of Connie to put me among those stars." The team appeared in the concluding installment of Mack's own life story, published in The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph last Monday. The Flying Dutchman commented at some length on Mack's selections. He gave an interesting discussion on Jimmy Collins, whom Mack selected over all other third base stars as his hot-corner guardian. In making his choice Connie had to pass up dazzling stars like Pie Traynor, Freddy Lindstrom, Bill Bradley, Tommy Leach and a few others.

"JIMMY COLLINS truly was a marvelous player," said Honus. "Bad hops didn't count with him and he was the last word in ease and grace. Also don't forget that Jimmy was the first of the third basemen to make the bunt play with one hand. In his day most of the third-sackers rushed in and picking up the ball in two hands, would lose time in cutting it to first base. Jimmy took these taps in his right hand and then let fly with the ball. The whole action had the grace of a fawn. Collins also was a dangerous hitter, and he could cover a lot of ground and he was very smart.

"If I were picking a team I would have to choose a different catcher in the place of the star selected by Mack. I see he named Buck Ewing. I saw quite a bit of Ewing and he certainly showed me everything, but if I were to draw a hair-line decision I would give the receiving berth to Johnny Kling. What a smart and clever catcher he was—and a dandy hitter, and thrower! But Connie may be right, for he had a lot of chance to study Ewing."

SIGNS THAT THE ultimatum fired by the majors and the fixing of December 1 as the dead line would mean the end of the tiresome draft wrangle were too good to be true. The five non-draft leagues have neither bowed to the ultimatum nor definitely rejected it, but have offered to reopen consideration of the whole question with the majors if the latter consent to withdraw within 15 days their threats to break off relations with the smaller loops.

So, though December 1 has come and gone, the sides are neither

SCHOOL BUYS FIELD

WASHINGTON, Pa., Dec. 3.—The Monongahela, Pa., school district has purchased the athletic field used by its high school teams since 1924. At that time a field was leased from the city and prominent citizens gave promissory notes to the proposition. The City Council approved the sale of the field to the school district for $5,775.

COACH FINDS ELIMINATION BIG TASK

By W. A. (BILL) ALEXANDER

Georgia Tech Coach.
Member All-America Board of Football.
(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

It is easy for anyone to select an all-Southern team that will be a good one from the wealth of material in southeastern colleges. To select the best team is an impossibility because no one man can obtain the necessary information for this task.

Bill Alexander

An attempt will be made to select not just a good team but a great team, a team that would uphold the prestige of this section against any eleven in the country.

To make such a team the player must not only have the weight, speed, strength and mechanical ability necessary to his position, but, in addition, be a player who has that indefinable thing called "spirit." The players on this team must be men who have been leaders on their own teams, men who in time of stress and in the face of disaster have rallied their teammates to go on and win.

[illegible] have been selected [illegible] there is no difference between them. All of the men must [illegible] requirements for an all-Southern pick. Possibly the men on the first team have been a little more consistant in all of their games than the others.

DALRYMPLE BEST END

Dalrymple, of Tulane, stands out as the best end of the season, if not the greatest end produced in the South. Schwartz, of Vanderbilt, tips the scales at 212 pounds, but is as active and agile as any end of the lot. He is a tower of strength defensively and has such height and bulk that he can catch passes when completely surrounded by defensive backs. Smith and Maffett, of Georgia, are as good as Dalrymple and Schwartz in most respects and it is difficult to leave them off the first team. I expect that they are the best pair of ends on any team in the country.

Sington, of Alabama, at right tackle, is easy to pick for the first team. Everybody who sees him play simply says: "The greatest linesman in the South." In addition to his prowess as a lineman, he is one of the best men in the country at the difficult art of kicking-off.

MAREE AT TACKLE

Maree, of Georgia Tech, is given the other tackle post over McCanse, of Tulane, and Clements, of Alabama, because he is bigger and faster. In addition, Maree is capable of doing the punting for his team. Down field under punts, Maree and Sington would strike terror to any safety man.

Steele, of Florida, has been playing good football for three years and deserves any honors that may come his way. Fast as a streak in running interference, quick as a cat on his charge, he is the ideal type for guard duty in the modern game of football. Steele goes on the first team without question. The other guard position goes to Krajcovic, of Maryland. The writer has not seen this young man play, but has reliable information that he is the main reliance of a very fine Maryland line and that he will rate with any guard in America. Maddox, of Georgia, is another guard who deserves many of the flattering press notices about his play. His work in Georgia's big games has been away above par. He is a terror to opposing backfields, as he spends most of the afternoon visiting behind the enemy's lines.

Center is the most important position on a football team. A poor center will ruin any offense and the defensive requirements for a

PLAY NO. 3.

In a contest between Pittsburgh University and Iowa State, Cohen, of Pittsburgh, makes a personal foul against Wood, of Iowa State. Following the calling of this foul he throws the ball to the far end of the court and is charged with a technical foul for delaying the game.

What is the correct ruling as to which foul should be tossed first?

ANSWER.

The referee rules that the first toss shall be made on the technical foul and then comes the throw on the personal foul. This would be true even though the fouls were committed in the reverse order. The importance of this is that after technical fouls are missed the ball goes to the center, while, on personal fouls, the ball is in play under the basket when missed.

DRAFT QUESTION UP TO MAJORS

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The draft question tossed back into the laps of the majors, minor league club owners turned their attention today to the first session of the twenty-ninth annual convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Election of officers, appointment of committees, the secretary's report and election of a new national board of arbitration formed the agenda for the first day. It seemed possible that the draft, sole topic among the delegates Monday and yesterday, might not even be mentioned in the association's sessions.

Elsewhere, however, baseball men tried to guess just where the heated dispute between the majors and the five non-draft leagues would lead. The next move in the complex controversy must come from the majors as a result of a resolution adopted by the non-draft leagues affected—the International, Pacific Coast, American Association, Western League and Three-Eye League. They offered to enter into new negotiations with the majors, provided the latter withdrew within 15 days their threat to discontinue all business relations with the affected minors.

In brief, the non-draft circuits are ready to confer with the majors on the big leagues' demand that they become subject to the draft, but only if the figurative ax is removed from over their heads. If the majors withdraw their ultimatum, then the minors will appoint a committee to discuss with a similar major league group the whole draft problem and, if possible, reach an agreement.

Jocko Conlan, outfielder with the Toledo club of the American Association, was traded today to the Montreal club of the International League for Elam Van Gilder, veteran right-hand pitcher. Van Gilder formerly was with the Detroit Tigers and St. Louis Browns.

BLUFFITE GRID CARD HARDEST IN HISTORY

Dukes' '31 Card

Sept. 19—Geneva College at Pittsburgh.
Sept. 26—West Virginia at Morgantown.
Oct. 3—Oglethorpe U. at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 9—Loyola U. (Chicago) at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 10—Georgetown U. at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 17—West Maryland at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 24—Catholic U. at Pittsburgh.
Nov. 7—Holy Cross College at Worcester, Mass.
Nov. 26—North Dakota U. at Pittsburgh.
Nov. 27—Howard College at Birmingham, Ala.

*Night games.

Opening with Geneva College, a rival of 31 years, not 26, according to the Rev. Henry McDermott, former vice president of Duquesne University, the Dukes will again inaugurate the local football season next year when they play the Covenanters at Forbes Field on September 19. The Duke schedule for 1931 has been announced officially and is the most difficult grid card ever attempted by the Night Riders.

NIGHT AND DAY TILTS

An equal number of night and day games will be played by Duquesne and seven of the contests are carded for Forbes Field, while the remaining three are to be played abroad. The Dukes go to Morgantown against West Virginia University, to Worcester, Mass., to meet Holy Cross College and to Birmingham, Ala., on Thanksgiving Day to clash with Howard College.

Four new names of major importance appear on the heavy card for 1931 announced for the Layden proteges. Devoid of setups of any kind, the Dukes will meet Georgetown University, Holy Cross College, Oglethorpe University and Western Maryland as new opponents, while other tough dates will be found in West Virginia University, North Dakota University, Loyola, of Chicago, Catholic University and the Covenanters.

NO SETUPS

Although 14 veteran gridders are lost to the Dukes this June, they feel confident in facing a veritable "suicide schedule." Head Coach Elmer Layden is following the policies of Knute Rockne, his former coach, as a member of the Four Horsemen of Notre Dame, in his avoidance of "breathers" of any kind for next year.

BAKER THROUGH AS PASSER

By JESS CARVER.

Eddie Baker, captain and quarterback of the Pitt football team this fall, and guard on the varsity basketball team the past two seasons, is definitely through as a floor star for the Panthers as a result of his decision to join the all-East football team on its trip to California for the East-West football game.

When Baker made it known that he had accepted the bid to Coach Andy Kerr, of the Eastern staff, Dr. H. C. Carlson, basketball coach of Pitt, informed him that he need not come out for basketball upon his return ome, as by that time his team would be set. The Panther five opens its season next Saturday night.

Baker went to the Coast with the Pitt football squad for the Tournament of Roses game last winter and returned with a bad knee that handicapped him most of the basketball season.

With Charley Hyatt gone, Coach Carlson was banking on the experienced Baker this season, but he believes the best results will be obtained by shaping his team without awaiting the return of Eddie.

I'm just wondering a bit whether or not Wash-Jeff won't throw a lot of forward passes in the direction of Carnegie Tech as the Presidents and the Tartans tie up in their charity game in the Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Carnegie football teams usually have worked on the theory that a fast-moving offense is the best defense, but this week, as Coach Bobby Waddell puts his lads through their paces, he's paying strict attention to the defensive end of the situation, and especially to bolstering his eleven's defense against passes. Every club Tech has played this year has been able to heave 'em successfully. The consequences have been damaging.

The Skibos had a long session yesterday, going through every play in the Skibo repertoire. Stu Dueger was in charge of the club at quarterback.

The Tipoff

Dexter Very, the well-known local football referee, has drawn the important Army-Navy assignment in New York December 13. Last year Dex was the eastern official on the Tech-Southern California game in Los Angeles.

Here are a few things you might wish to know: First, that Jimmy DeHart, former Pitt all-America quarterback and successively coach at Wash-Lee and Duke, is slated to replace Navy Bill Ingram at Annapolis.

Second, that this fellow Lukats, who started at right halfback for Notre Dame against Army, is a boy Rockne hoped to keep under cover this fall. He is said to be the best passer and kicker on the squad.

GROVE LEADS PITCHERS IN AMERICAN LOOP

LEFTY CREDITED WITH 28 WINS, FIVE DEFEATS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

While George Earnshaw came out of the recent World Series as its slab hero, it is apparent, in the official averages released today, that George was hardly in a class with his team-mate, Bob Grove, through the 1929 campaign of the American League.

Lefty Grove

The illustrious southpaw stands on a pedestal by himself in the light of the figures. Lefty led in percentage of victories, total victories, earned run percentage, strikeouts, and whatnot.

GROVE WINS 28, LOSES 5

Earnshaw, on the other hand, was far down the list, especially in the matter of earned run effectiveness.

Grove won 28 and lost five games and allowed only three runs per game. Earnshaw won 22 and lost 13, but his earned run average was as poor as 4.44 per game.

The speed-ball lefthander cut down no less than 214 batters over the strikeout route. Earnshaw was second in strikeouts with 193.

Ad Liska, the Washington underhand hurler, finished second to Grove in earned run effectiveness and Wesley Ferrell, the Cleveland sensation, was third.

This year is presented for the first time a new and interesting table — team pitching records. Readers will learn for the first time the total number of innings pitched by the staffs of each club and, also for the first time, will see at a glance what the combined opposition accomplished against the pitchers of each team. As an additional item of interest, the earned runs made by each team against the pitchers of the seven opposing clubs will be found in the last column to the right.

LISKA IS SECOND

Inspired by the knowledge of what their manager accomplished under serious handicaps for many years, the Washington staff allowed only 3.96 earned runs per game, the only team to limit opposing batters to less than four runs per game.

Of all the pitchers who worked 45 or more innings, Southpaw Grove was the most effective. Hurling 291 innings, the equivalent of 32½ games, batters could score but 3.00 runs per nine inning game against his smoking speed and elusive curve.

Using a peculiar underhand delivery, young Adolph Liska, hurling 151 rounds, but only seven complete games, ranked next to Grove with a season average of 3.28 earned runs per game. Wesley Ferrell was third in effectiveness and Walter Stewart, fourth.

APPEARS IN 50 GAMES

Grove appeared in the most games, 50, and was closely followed by his colleague Earnshaw, with 49 games. Lyons pitched the most innings, 298, the largest number of complete games, 29, and won 22 games, more than one-third the games won by his team.

Ferrell pitched the second largest number of innings, 297, and won the second largest number of games, 25, and tied with Crowder for second place in complete games with 25. Earnshaw started the most games, 39. Hudlin and Al Thomas were taken out the most times, 20 times each, and Earnshaw 19 times.

Brother Acts Appear on Local Boxing Scene

EXCLUSIVE PHOTOS by Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

IRVING RODGERS — Two new brother acts in the local boxing realm. Irving Rodgers, 19-year-old brother of Jackie, star local Negro featherweight, makes his debut in the ring

JACKIE RODGERS — in one of the bouts at the Moose Temple, Friday night. Abe Goldstein, 16, is a student at Schenley High School and is taking lessons in the manly art

ABE GOLDSTEIN — from his big brother, Phil, lightweight boxer and coach of the Y. M. H. A. amateur mitt team. Abe is developing into a fine boxer.

BROTHERS TEAM IN BOXING

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Two new brother acts are appearing in the local boxing scheme of things, to take the place of the Zivic brothers, Pete and Jack, now out of the picture, although a third brother, Fritz Zivic, is just coming into his own in a big way in the amateur ranks. The new brother pairs are the Rodgers boys, Jackie and Irving, and the Goldsteins, Phil and Abe.

Irving Rodgers is only 19 and is taller, rangier and heavier than his illustrious, hard-hitting featherweight brother, scaling all of 138 pounds. He will make his ring debut against Frankie Portland, of Ambridge, in one of the bouts on the Moose Temple card, Friday night.

Abe Goldstein is only 16 and is a student at Schenley High School. He has been working out with the amateur boxing team of the Y. M. H. A., of which Brother Phil, local lightweight boxer, is coach. Abe is not yet decided on whether he wants to follow boxing as a career, although he likes the sport. He is a good student and is looking forward to a college course at an institution where he can compete on the varsity mitt team.

Between Rounds

Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion, who lost to Steve Halaiko at Rochester, N. Y., Monday night, goes to the post against Maxie Strub at Erie, Friday night. Ray Collins and Wesley Ramey box the eight-round semi-final.

Mickey Cohen, of Cleveland, boxes Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, in one of the bouts on the card at Motor Square Garden one week from next Monday night.

Only the semi-final remains to be arranged for next Monday night's show at the Garden, which will feature Tony Herrera and Eddie Anderson in the 10-round windup. Walter Ketchel, formerly of Detroit, and Sunny Jim McVey, of Braddock, middleweights, will box the opening bout, and Joey Spiegel, of Uniontown A. H. A. lightweight champion, makes his professional debut against Eddie Nelson, New York Negro, in the second bout.

A hard-punching battle is assured when Al Becker, of Sheraden, clashes with Jack Tracy, Negro middleweight, of the North Side, and formerly of Louisville, in one of the two 10-round bouts at the Moose Temple Friday night. Tracy recently knocked out Bob McCaffrey twice after the latter had stopped Becker and Al figures he can take a short cut back along the return trail by winning decisively over Tracy. His last time out, Al stopped Marcus Noll, another hard-hitting Negro middleweight, in a tough fight. Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side, and Allen Beatty, of McKeesport, who showed such fine form in trouncing Jackie Herman at the Garden Monday night, box the 10-round main event and Hans Roberts and Larry Kaufman have been matched for the second bout.

Frankie Porto, of Glassport, boxes Midget Mike O'Dowd at Newark, O., tonight. Charley Tarzan and Nordi Smith are in the semi-final.

The field in the Western Pennsylvania amateur championship belt tournament at McKeesport, which will be concluded tomorrow night, has been reduced from more than 100 to 22 in the three nights' boxing already waged during the past month. The class of the district amateur talent remains for the titular matches.

Amateur Bouts Held At Homewood A. C.

Six fine amateur boxing bouts, with one of them going four rounds, were staged last night by the Homewood Athletic Club. Jack Grossman, of Y. M. H. A. defeated Frank Deal, Harry T. Little Club, in the best contest. The summary:

118-pound class—Andy Kosel, Valley A. C., won from Frank Tatomer, Y. M. H. A., three rounds, decision.

126-pound class—Robert Beitzel, Valley A. C., won from Louis Leon, Y. M. H. A., three rounds, decision; Frank Deal, Harry T. Little A. C., won from Jack Grossman, Y. M. H. A., three rounds, decision.

147-pound class—George Lupinicci, Willow A. C., won from Art Arnold, Homewood A. C., four rounds, decision.

NO CONTEST BOUT

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—A 10-round bout between Maxie Rosenbloom, light heavyweight champion, and Paul Swiderski, Syracuse, N. Y., ended in the seventh round last night when Seneca Taylor, Missouri boxing commissioner, disqualified Swiderski and called the affair "no contest." Taylor said he would hold up Swiderski's purse for his unsatisfactory showing.

Rodgers to Scout For West Virginia

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Dec. 3.—In the maze of kaleidoscopic events in West Virginia University's football coaching situation here yesterday, three features stand out:

First, Earle (Greasy) Neale has been definitely approved not only by the athletic board but by President Turner, and his employment is settled.

Second, Neale has accepted the appointment.

Third, Ira E. Rodgers is again to take the role of chief assistant and scout for Neale.

Date For Title Grid Tilt to be Decided

LATROBE, Pa., Dec. 3.—(AP.)—The date and place for the post-season football game between Monessen and Redstone high schools to decide the championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League will be decided at a meeting this afternoon in Uniontown.

BREAK SPORTS RELATIONS

ALL-SOUTHERN TEAMS NAMED

ROBERTS GETS CALL

Roberts, of Tulane, is an easy choice for the job on the first team. He has all of the qualifications necessary for a great center—height, weight, speed and tackling ability. He feeds the ball to his backs with beautiful precision on every play. Defensively, Roberts is keen on figuring what the other team will do and places himself accordingly.

Second place goes to Lipscomb, of North Carolina. He is an accurate snapper and has been the outstanding figure in a weak line. Against forward passes, Lipscomb has been the best center in the section.

Quarterback, like center, is a position of vital importance. Poor signal calling will wreck a fine offense. Good signal calling can produce touchdowns with limited plays and indifferent backs.

DODD AT QUARTERBACK

Dodd, of Tennessee; Downes, of Georgia, and Branch, of North Carolina, have proved capable of calling the right plays and in making full use of the weapons in hand. Dodd gets the call because for three years he has been right. Downes and Branch are juniors and have one more year to go in which to prove their worth. In addition to being a fine field general, Dodd is the best punter and passer in the South and can run well with the ball. Dodd's chief asset, however, is his coolness under fire and the ability never to guess wrong when he violates the orthodox thing in a football game. In game after game, Dodd has pulled some play that, according to the tradition of football, is all wrong. But Dodd knows when the unexpected will work, something that few men in the game ever have been able to master. He is one of the greatest backs of all time.

ROBERTS LEADS FULLBACKS

Roberts, of Georgia, gets first place among the fullbacks on his ball-carrying ability. He can hit a line like a ton of brick, and, once in the open, he is as clever as the best halfback. Roberts has the ability to get yards and that is a big factor in a team's success. Felts, of Tulane, is placed on the second team because, in my opinion, he is the most valuable back in Tulane's great quartet.

Suther, of Alabama; Murray, of Duke; Zimmerman, of Tulane; Maxey, of William and Mary; McCall, of Davidson, and Dickens, of Georgia, all are great halfbacks. Suther and Murray get the call because they have the ability always to gain the necessary yardage in a pinch. Zimmerman, of Tulane, and Maxey, of William and Mary, are second choices.

The first team has everything a team needs to win; a great defensive line, a smart quarterback, a fine punter, a fine passer, three backs that can run like wild horses, a smart secondary, a sure punt catcher. What more is needed on an all star team?

P. Waner Linked In Big Winter Transaction

MONTREAL, Dec. 3.—The name of Paul Waner, slugging Pirate outfielder, again is being mentioned in several proposed deals at the annual minor league conference being held here.

While nothing definite has been learned, it is reported that the Reds, Cards and Giants are eager to obtain the Pirate star.

Rumors that Jim Bottomley, Cardinal first baseman, was slated to go elsewhere, also were revived.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association basketball team will be out to score its second straight victory tonight when it opposes the Penn Five, of Sharpsburg, on the latter's floor in one of the two West Penn League frays on the schedule. In the other West Penn League game the South Side Falcons invade St. Joseph's Lyceum to oppose the North Side Bulldogs.

The Y. M. H. A.-Penn Five originally was scheduled for Friday, but was moved up by mutual consent of the managements. The contest brings together two old basketball rivals and preparations have been made to handle a large crowd at Sharpsburg High School.

TEAM IN SHAPE

Coach Buck Gefsky, of the Y. M. H. A., has been drilling his team all week for this game and the Belleflelders will take the floor in the best of physical condition.

Tomorrow night the Gefsky charges face their second tough game of the week when the Knickerbockers of Lawrenceville are the attraction at the Y. M. H. A.

In the other contests scheduled tonight Sewickley Y plays at North Boroughs in a Wagner Institutional League fray; Rankin Christian Center plays at Wilmerding and Hill Top Y at Kingsley House in the County Amateur League; Mt. Troy Presbyterian plays at Trinity Cathedral Royals and Faith Chapel at First Presbyterian in the Pittsburgh Church League, while no less than seven games are carded in the two sections of the Metropolitan loop.

LAFAYETTES COP

The Duquesne Lafayettes and Fintex copped their opening battles in the Allegheny County League last night. The Lafayette quint nosed out the J. J. Melles, 25 to 22, while Fintex defeated the Charleroi Merchants, 35 to 24.

The Schneiders set down the North Side Buicks, 25 to 20, in the West Penn League, while Manchester walloped B. & O., 40 to 18, in the Greater Pittsburgh loop.

Floor Notes

Duquesne, the city of basketball champions, virtually claims two teams in the Allegheny County League this season. Besides the Lafayettes, defending champions, fans in that section are following the fortunes of Charleroi Inasmuch as that team is composed practically of former stars of the Duquesne Waltzers and Duquesne Lafayettes. Jerry Wunderlich, Joe Drotar, Jack Reinick, Eddie Klein and Joe Pollack are products of Duquesne.

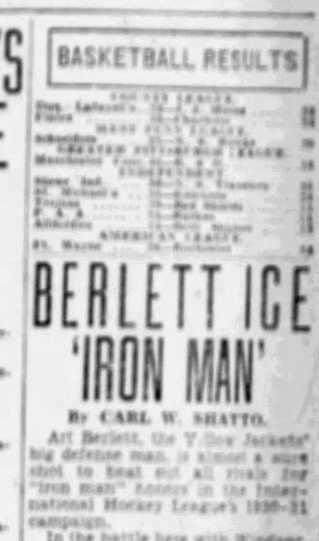
The Goldenson Vanities are contemplating playing several benefit games for charity this season. Early indications are that the Vanities will better their record of last season when they won 27 straight games. Teams interested in booking this attraction call Hemlock 2558.

When Nate Lippe, former Geneva College star, appears in the lineup of the Ellwood City Club against the Griffen Oils tonight it will mark the fourth team on which he has played in that popular circuit. Lippe at various times has played with the Enoch Rauhs, Merry-Fintex and the old Siano Club.

Munkie Ketchel is not among strangers in the Fintex lineup. The former Goldenson flash is playing besides Buzz Leisering and Bobby Angelo, both of whom were stellar performers on the South Side quintet last season.

The Paulists, of Butler, have the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House as their attraction in Butler tonight.

BASKETBALL RESULTS



BERLETT ICE 'IRON MAN'

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Art Berlett, the Y Dee Jackets' big defense man, is almost a sure shot to beat out all rivals for "iron man" honors in the International Hockey League's 1930-31 campaign.

In the battle here with Windsor, in which the locals held the Bulldogs to a 4-4 tie, Art was at right defense during 65 minutes of the 70-minute overtime fight. In his next start, against Detroit, he was not given any relief. The only time that he wasn't in the thick of the fray was when he was in the penalty box.

Berlett is well equipped for his Iron Man act. He is six feet tall, weighs about 200 pounds and has that endurance known only to youth. Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local club and a keen judge of ice talent, predicts that his strong man will graduate to the National circuit next season.

FRASER FINE AID

Gordon Fraser, former Pirate purchased from Philadelphia, appears to be an ideal defense mate for Art. Both are hard workers and stiff checkers, and they team together perfectly.

Fraser and Berlett will be put to a stiff test tomorrow when Cleveland's International loop champs will appear at Duquesne Garden to revive the ancient Pittsburgh-Cleveland ice rivalry. Center Alex Gray and Right Wing Ken Doraty, of the Indians, are just about the best scoring duo in the circuit, and they figure to give any defense plenty of trouble. In the Indians' early games, Doraty and Gray did all of the Cleveland scoring. They stand fourth and third, respectively, in the league's individual scoring race.

ART BERLETT

LAROCHE SUSPENDED

In meeting the Indians the Jackets will present a revamped spare front line as a result of the indefinite suspension late yesterday of Charles LaRoche, right wing, for insubordination and breaking his contract.

"LaRoche signed a contract in Toronto," President Schooley said today, "and when he came here he told me that he had been promised a bonus, to be paid at the end of the season, in addition to his salary. I told him that I knew nothing of the bonus, but to make sure that he would give his gest efforts I increased his salary to cover its amount.

"Yesterday LaRoche demanded another salary increase, and when it was refused he refused to accompany the team to Windsor. Our payroll is heavier than that of any other club in the league. We are willing to pay for a winning team, but we can't tolerate holdups and I ordered his suspension."

The Jackets meet the Bulldogs in Windsor tonight.

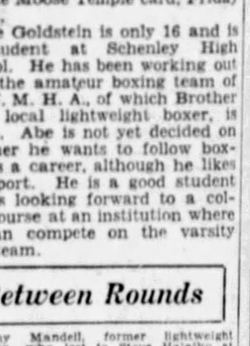
at peace nor at war, but are still making the draft issue a game of tag. And that's what it will continue to be unless the majors show enough firmness to stick to their ultimatum and terminate relations with the non-draft organizations. The proposal of the latter to reopen the question—no one can recall when it was ever closed—merely means a continuance of what the opposing factions have been doing for years without getting anywhere.



John D. Holohan

THE SPLENDID FOOTBALL schedule of Duquesne University for next year, just announced by Graduate Manager John D. Holohan, further emphasizes the Bluff school's remarkable advance in the college sport. The addition of games with such high-class teams as Holy Cross, Georgetown, Western Maryland and Oglethorpe, and the retention of such popular numbers as the contests with West Virginia, Geneva, North Dakota, Catholic U., Loyola and Howard spells impressive progress that puts the Dukes right up in the front ranks and establishes this city more firmly than ever as one of the greatest football centers in America. Unquestionably the 1931 schedule lifts the Dukes to the highest position they have ever attained in the great collegiate game.

A. P. ALL-EAST TEAM NAMED

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—(AP.)—Eight colleges are represented on the All-Eastern football eleven for 1930, selected by a consensus of sport writers and named by the Associated Press.

Yale has three men on the team, the Army two, and Dartmouth, Harvard, Fordham, Cornell, Columbia and Colgate one apiece.

Heading the first team lineup are two players who were virtually unanimous choices—Ben Ticknor, Harvard's great center, and Leonard MacAluso, giant Colgate fullback, who leads the country's major college players in scoring.

Ticknor and Booth are the only repeaters from last year. Fay Vincent, of Yale, a first team tackle in 1929, makes the second eleven.

Hood, of Pitt, was selected as fullback, and Eyth, of Carnegie Tech, as a halfback, on the third team. The teams:

STOCK MARKET RETREATS SLOWLY

List Recovers From Early Slump Only to Recede As Selling Increases

NEW YORK, Dec. 3—(AP.)—The stock market slowly retreated today, as an ooze of molasses-like liquidation appeared in its path.

The cautious advance of the past three days had been too unimpressive to attract a following, and President Hoover's report that conditions did not warrant continuation of the 1 per cent income tax reduction was an adverse psychological factor, although Wall Street bankers have traditionally favored a conservative fiscal policy.

After a slight slump in the first hour, the list recovered until more extensive selling appeared in the early afternoon, causing fairly general declines of a point or two.

Announcement by Carnegie and Bethlehem Steels of a $1-a-ton advance in quotations for plates, shapes and bars for the first quarter had been foreshadowed several weeks ago, when steel producers warned their customers that current quotations could not be guaranteed for the first quarter. It had been previously discounted by the market and failed to have further influence. Iron Age reported that the seasonal decline in steel production had continued during the past week, reducing operations to 39 per cent, from 41 a week ago.

The report of electric power production was the most favorable of the mid-week statistics. The week ended November 29 showed a decline of only 3.8 per cent from the like week of last year.

A conspicuous item in the days public utility news was the declaration of a 20 per cent stock dividend by American Gas and Electric.

The weekly freight car loadings figures, covering the period ended November 22, were again unfavorable, showing a drop of nearly 50,000 cars from the previous week.

The weekly petroleum figures were about a standoff.

Credit conditions held steady, with call money still at 2 per cent. There was little demand, and offerings were light. There has been some relaxation of the money market since Monday, however, when loan calling was extensive.

IDLENESS BIG PROBLEM OF AMERICA

Labor Perishable and Must Be Used Promptly; Need Of Co-Ordination Apparent

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—America's biggest economic problem is to find a formula for putting back on the jobs the millions who are out of work.

Apart from the individual suffering, there is immense social waste in idle manpower. Labor is a perishable commodity, which must be used promptly.

Mr. Rukeyser

Now that deflation has taken place and correction of artificial conditions has to a large extent been effected, it is safer to undertake creative measures leading to recovery than would have been the case a little more than a year ago when President Hoover summoned captains of industry and labor leaders to the White House.

ANARCHY IN TRADE

Apart from specific abuses which crept into the economic system during the earlier period of prosperity, we have been suffering from a temporary breakdown in the economic machine which inevitably recurs as a result of an anarchy in business.

With America and the great industrial nations of Western Europe suffering from lack of coordination and long-term centralized planning, the outlaw Soviet Russia has been more logical. It now serves notice on the world that in two years it has achieved half of the objectives of its much advertised five-year economic plan.

The larger opportunity in economic statesmanship is to find a happy medium between extremism on the left and extremism on the right. The Chief Executive in the White House could make history by converting his drawing room into a focal point for coordinating the plans of private industry and governmental agencies.

The promise of the future is brilliant. The machinery is at hand to create products for the multitudes at an unprecedented rate—and these material resources should spell prosperity, not poverty.

PROJECTS APLENTY

The seeming oversupply of human labor really entails maladjustment. Until the great and necessary national projects, such as Mississippi flood control, modernization of public institutions, improvement of coast-to-coast highways, have been carried out, it will be ridiculous to talk of a glutted labor market.

Even with drifting, the country will, in my opinion, through the operation of natural corrective forces, gradually emerge from the depression. Such improvement in business, as may be expected in time, will correct cyclical unemployment but not technological unemployment. To meet the more permanent issue it will be necessary to give more co-ordinated direction to business, and consciously to set out to adapt the machine to man's needs, possibly shortening work days and work weeks and better distributing leisure and employment.

Forbes

Forbes States Hoover Wants Rail Mergers

—By B. C. FORBES—

I AM ADDRESSING the following open letter to the gentlemen named:

W. W. Atterbury, president, Pennsylvania Railroad.

Patrick E. Crowley, president, New York Central Railroad.

Daniel Willard, president, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, Chesapeake and Ohio, Nickel Plate, Erie, etc.

Gentlemen:

Mr. Forbes

The time has come for you to drop all obstructionist tactics and to agree upon definite plans for creation of trunk line systems, in accordance with the spirit of the transportation act of 1920.

You have been bickering and quarreling long enough.

The public are reaching the conclusion that personal ambition, personal pride, personal vanity must be in some measure responsible for the delay in agreeing to the allocation of properties.

When the country was prosperous, your maneuvers attracted little attention or condemnation.

Today there is dire need for every citizen doing everything within his power to combat depression and unemployment.

You can do more than perhaps any other five business men in America. First, to bring about a transformation in sentiment and, second, to set in motion very substantial expenditures—for electrification, for terminals, for equipment, etc.

You presumably will have to reach a conclusion sooner or later—or have an agreement fastened upon you by the authorities at Washington.

Why dilly-dally, why work at cross-purposes, for a further indefinite period?

Why not picture the existing situation in this country as an emergency, an emergency demanding the waging of warfare against the continuation of widespread unemployment, industrial inactivity, pessimistic sentiment?

Warfare calls for the sinking of personal differences.

Warfare calls for self-sacrifice.

Will you not, therefore, get together in this spirit, adopt a policy of give-and take, determined to end the deadlock which has too long existed?

I understand that President Hoover is extremely anxious that you follow this course.

I understand moreover, that, if you gentlemen will compose your differences and present agreed-upon plans to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Chief Executive will enthusiastically use his influence to expedite official approval.

Members of the Interstate Commission cannot but be imbued with a keen sense of the emergency conditions now confronting the nation. That they would not be eager to cooperate to the limit in hastening the return of confidence and business activity and fuller employment is unthinkable.

The present holds an opportunity which, if scorned, may not return.

WHETHER THE gentlemen to whom the foregoing is addressed will take constructive or obstructive action remains to be seen.

I am informed that President Hoover has undergone a mental transformation, whereas heretofore he has refrained from asserting himself. I am told he is now determined to follow an aggressive policy. Criticism has finaly stung him. He realizes that his record heretofore has not won him general popularity.

Instead of remaining in the background, his intimates now tell me he is determined to assert himself vigorously. In this matter of railway consolidations he is represented as having very emphatic views—he wants action, not further palaver.

According to my information, this attitude he has communicated without equivocation to those upon whom devolves the chief responsibility for action or inaction in Eastern railway consolidations.

OUR SO-CALLED leaders, not only in the transportation world, but in other walks of life, have not raised themselves in public esteem during 1930, to say the least. It is high time they bestirred themselves to earn a different public estimate of themselves.

(Copyright, 1930, by B. C. Forbes.)

Hayes Gets Control of Central Ohio

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

RATIFICATION OF PLANS for the sale of the Central Ohio Steel Products Company to the Hayes Body Corporation will solve the expansion problems of the purchased organization.

Central Ohio has two distinct lines of products. It makes steel grave vaults and bodies for hydraulic dump trucks. The truck body business has been expanding rapidly. Recent contracts indicate that the company's orders in the coming year will show a very marked increase over the volume of past years. To fill these orders it would have been necessary for Central Ohio to make large expenditures for plant expansion. This would have required new financing.

The consolidation will make it possible to produce the increased volume of truck bodies in one of the plants of the Hayes Body Corporation. Hayes' plants can start production of truck bodies with only a moderate expenditure for new equipment.

Dividends Earned

CENTRAL OHIO has maintained its earnings at a fairly satisfactory rate during the present year. It is understood that dividend requirements are being earned. The stock was on a $2 annual dividend basis until October, when payments were suspended pending the completion of the merger. In 1929 net profit was $100,278, or $2.91 a share on 32,000 shares. This compared with $83,195, or $2.76 a share on 20,000 shares in 1928.

Hayes Body, which is directly dependent on the state of the automobile industry, has been operating at a deficit this year. The restoration of the motor trade to a normal basis should see the restoration of Hayes earnings. While Hayes does not compare favorably with Central Ohio in recent earnings, the organization can provide the plant facilities and the working capital which the latter needs to handle its increased volume of business.

Maintains Identity

CENTRAL OHIO will maintain its corporate identity. The holders of its stock will be given 10-year 6 per cent bonds of Hayes Body. The Central Ohio stock will be taken on a basis of $26.50 a share. The bonds, $1,000,000 of which have been authorized, will be convertible into Hayes stock at $15 a share. The stock of Central Ohio will be deposited as collateral security for the bonds. Hayes has no other funded debt.

Central Ohio operates a plant at Galion, O. Hayes has plants at Ionia, Mich.; Grand Rapids, Mich., and Indianapolis, Ind. In recent years a major part of the output has been sold to Chrysler, Marmon and Peerless. A short time ago the production of bodies for American Austin was started.

Profits Decline

WHILE HAYES REPORTED a deficit of $245,046 in 1929, it earned $884,528, or $3.36 a share on 250,000 shares of common stock outstanding in 1928. This compared with $42,204, or 21 cents a share in 1927.

The balance sheet of Hayes Body of June 30, 1930, showed physical properties carried at $3,476,237 and total assets of $5,412,585. Current assets amounted to $1,842,704 against current liabilities of $241,153. There were no capital liabilities other than 317,249 common shares.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

Freeman's Death Effects Many Business Men

CHAPTER XXIII.

Tommy Gillespie read the newspapers and wrote his own theories. Annie had told him she had intended to dye her incendiary red hair. And she had told him, too, that she would murder Freeman. Obviously she hadn't. But Tommy believed that she had put him on the spot, somehow, for the murderers.

Anyway, she had gone the route for him, her Tommy boy. His enemy was tripping on the threshold of Hell. The girl had not double-crossed him. Tommy knew it. He would shout it to a hundred million people if necessary.

Still they wouldn't understand. He couldn't quite—either. But this much he knew—she of a dirty world had come clean with him!

Unlawful Practices

And how the D. A. turned up evidence! He found so much, everyone agreed that Freeman had really lived too long. He had been engaged in a comprehensive dope traffic—he had smuggled Chinks—he had extorted and perverted and corrupted—he was a very naughty citizen! The police had clues, the newspapers had hunches, the prosecutor had plans and the burg had a head-ache.

Frank McQuade, for 35 years a police reporter at Headquarters, numbered among his acquaintances more racketeers, gunmen, thieves and heels than the Chief of Detectives or a bail bondsman. Hard-boiled, synical, wise. In his time he had covered many murder mysteries—the Rosenthal slaying, the Elwell killing, the Dot King tragedy—the best of them. He had dug up evidence in many a case that his paper had never printed.

On the morning when Silk Freeman was laid out and slithered by slugs in the lobby of the verminated Victory Hotel, and Polack Annie was copped, by a harness bull, McQuade called his office from the reporters' room in the shack just behind police headquarters.

"There was a reason in a thousand people's noodles why the B. B. should be bumped off," he told his city editor. "He was hooked up in every kind of racket in town. But I think the woman angle was all cock-eyed. You want theories? Okay, boss—I'll get you forty good, air-tight theories—and everyone'll be surefire and wrong . . . Yeah, I know it's a good story and you can't libel Freeman."

So McQuade waddled around the corner and threw in a drink. And after he had taken six he called his office back—in time for the home edition.

"Here's the real lowdown on why the Big Boy was shot." He explained to a rewrite man.

"You mean killed—he just died," corrected the rewrite man.

"Yeah? Well, here it is just the same: Freeman was running every racket in town. And he was gettin' ambitious. He was laying plans, big plans, to start muscling in on the muscles—from coast to coast. He was going to let them work their big and little rackets, and he'd work the workers, big and little. He'd already started in on Chicago, and it was a tough Chicago bunch that clipped him. They did it in regular Chicago style. He wanted to be the racketeer Czar and he got what the Czar got. Capone's behind it. That's all."

Effects Many People

He paused.

"And if you don't like that—here's another good theory——"

"B. B.'s dead!"

Before front pages shrieked it out in huge, box-car type, through the mysterious underworld wireless grapevine etherized the whispering message that Silk Freeman was washed up—he had toppled into Hell itself, head first—before that he had always landed on his feet.

The news went sizzling through the town, and it caused a flurry in Wall Street and up and down the luminous lane called Broadway. Silk's businesses and Silk's rackets and Silk's manipulation had been various and devious. The big shots in the underworld made themselves scarce and the big shots in the business world, many of them, found reasons for long deferred vacations.

Silk alive, most every one was safe—notwithstanding the evidence. Silk would never bleat. But Silk dead—that was another matter. Especially with such a personality as Silk, with so many enemies he had wrecked and so many allies he had made. Alive, little was known of Silk's private life and Silk's private vices and Silk's private whims—little known of his loves, his hatreds and his methods. When his book of life was closed it became public reading.

Marty's restaurant, one of Silk's pet hangouts, went dark, and the putative owner fled to Chicago. When it was found he owed the Big Boy $80,000, the executors of the estate foreclosed on his fashionable uptown apartment building and a huge sign was flaunted there, to the consternation of the tenant snobs, shrieking that the property was seized by the Freeman estate and would be auctioned off. The gat had bowed to the hammer.

At the apex of the excitement the Chief of Detectives, a superannuated veteran, resigned, ostensibly because of ill health, but for some deeper and dirtier reason. He had been friendly with the Big Boy in days gone by. About two days gone by.

The lights of a revue on Broadway flickered out, and then it was learned that the devil, Silk, had been the angel to the show. The legitimate builders in Brooklyn, who had lost in the past month millions of dollars' worth of property when their unfinished apartment houses were put to the torch, breathed more freely.

And Polack Annie — don't worry!

The flatfoots were dragging her out every day—now to the D. A.'s office, now to the Victory Hotel, now to Freeman's Park avenue apartment. They had shoved her face to face with old Pete. He had recognized her even without her wicked, fiery hair. But she had floated him off his flat feet with her flaming eyes . . . and when the assistant to the man who sends the chumps to stir had faced him and yelled: "Do you know this woman?"—he had swallowed his antiquated Adam's apple and answered: "Never seen 'er in me life!"

Investigation Continues

Annie wasn't feeling so hot. In the wagon, on the way to the station on the day Silk's obit had been written on the loaded typewriter, she had swallowed the sickening remainder of the hair dye. And she knew that without another application her tresses would soon burn again. Which must be extremely embarrassing. But Annie hadn't dyed her wits.

The cops kept on raking the ashes. Silk Freeman had been brawled up with Tall Tom Gillespie. Everybody knew that. They had a few of the River Rats still in clink from that Cherry st. shindy . . . Sure, Gillespie admitted that Freeman had tried to strong-arm in on his business, and that he had arranged with Cyclone Tim McClosky and other "independent" teamsters to carry on. That was all he knew about it. He was a very, very busy and respectable citizen, and his word went — that was that. And that was all.

DAILY TRUE STORY Number 1291

"Young women," Julius Wainright said to his daughter, Inez, "are weird creatures."

Inez laughed and held the lighter to her father's cigar, which was not fat and black such as millionaires are supposed to smoke—it was a pale, mild panetella.

"Almost as weird," she answered, "as fathers—these creatures who believe they know the sort of man their daughters should marry."

The major—Wainright had been a major in the war, one who did not scratch up Washington desks with his spurs, but muddied his leggins in the trenches—fanned the cigar smoke away from his daughter's pretty face and shook his head dolefully.

"Your Aunt Sabrina doesn't like young Sanford," he reminded her.

"My Aunt Sabrina never married. So far as I can learn she never petted. What she knows about men or love is less than I know about the Chinese alphabet."

"Take a young chap, now," the major mused aloud for his daughter's benefit, "a young chap who is tall and well set up and has wavy hair—put a corduroy suit on him, a wide felt hat and leather leggins, and what happens? Every girl who sees him falls in love with him—ahem that is—she gets full of romantic fluff and thinks it's love."

And Phil Sanford wears just that costume, Dad. But if he had happened to be wearing a tux or blue denim overalls, I'd fall just as much in love with him."

"Your Aunt Sabrina is a wizard at judging people, and she insists that there's something wrong with this young Sanford."

Sees Sanford

"Aunt Sabrina may be a female, but any female who never had the least use for men isn't much of a woman. I'll thank her to devote herself to judging art and literature and antiques."

The Wainright Construction Company was putting in some rather immense dams and retaining walls that would constitute the new Metropole Reservoirs. Phil Sanford was one of the thousand or so men employed by the company. He had applied for work in the office of the construction engineers, but there was nothing there for him. He took the next best thing, having charge of the cement and gravel, checking up on it and watching the mixing of this cement.

Inez Wainright had seen him at her handsome home one day when her father had sent for him. The Wainright summer home was only a mile from where the work was going on. Phil Sanford had driven up the winding gravel drive in a muddy flivver.

Inez, reading on the veranda close to where her father was sitting at a wicker desk, going over reports, saw him hop out and come swinging up the steps, two at a time.

"You, Sanford?" her father had asked.

"Yes, sir. Mr. Tucker said you wanted to question me about something—"

"This—" the major held up a form report. "We had five carloads of cement sent out Monday, and there's only two on hand, while we hadn't got around to use any of this lot. What are you doing with it—selling it?"

"I'm not even buying it—three carloads of it. I sent it back, sir. It wasn't up to our standard. May I ask if you are in the habit of hiring men who sell your cement for petty graft?"

"What? What? Look here, what right have you to ask such an impertinent question?"

"The same right that you have to ask if I am stealing your lousy cement. Oh!"

Apologizes to Inez

Phil Sanford caught sight of Inez and turned ever redder.

"I am very sorry, miss. I thought we were alone," he murmured.

Inez nodded gravely at him. He turned to her father.

"What grade cement do you demand?" The major was getting sarcastic.

Sanford told him.

"That's unusual. I don't recollect. Don't believe we cut it quite so fine. I'll go inside and look up my memo. Wait a minute."

The major went inside.

"Won't you sit down?" Inez invited.

"Sorry, the Ahkoond of Swat didn't invite me, miss."

The major came out.

"Go back to your job, young fellow—you are dead right about it and I'd apologize except for one thing—you have only to watch supply, and grades of materials and I have to watch and remember everything. If the Granton Company puts up a howl about sending back inferior grade, let me know. I'll talk to 'em."

"Thanks, Maj. Wainwright, but I have a pretty good vocabulary of my own; however, I'll report to you, as you say."

He bowed to Inez and departed.

The ancient flivver spluttered and departed.

And that is how it all started.

Inez did fall in love with Phil Sanford. She did not wear her heart on her sleeve, however.

Sanford also fell in love with Inez, and he had hopes that some day, very far off, when he became a successful contracting engineer and had money and a swell car, he might make her fall in love with him—

Finally, after a scene with her father when he again warned her that her aunt was sure the young man was no good and an imposter, Inez went to her aunt.

"Unless you actually know that Phil is no good and a crook and all the silly things you say to father, please say no more. Your silly intuitions are unfair, auntie," Inez said.

"This is the first time you ever spoke to me like this," Aunt Sabrina gasped.

"Because this is the first time I have ever been in love."

"You'll throw yourself away—he's no good—"

"Prove it or apologize," snapped Inez.

Aunt Sabrina was furious. Secretly she secured a detective.

Weeks passed along as usual. Inez and Phil were together whenever possible for rides or a Saturday evening dance or Sunday riding or golf.

"Your wonderful Mr. Sanford," she said, "is an ex-convict!"

"Indeed?" Inez answered, her eyes flashing.

"That's right—don't lose your temper, just regard the facts," her father warned.

"I even know his number—he was convict No. 1291!"

Aunt Sabrina gloated as she announced this.

"You promised to listen to reason," her father warned.

"Here's his prison number tag—look."

They studied the brass tag. It bore the lettering:

RADLET
1 2 9 1

"There. Everybody knows Radlet Penitentiary. What more proof do you want? It was among his things."

Argues With Foreman

"When was he there, how long was he in, what did he do?" Inez demanded.

"We'll find out—now. Come along," and the major sent for his car.

Inez went along.

Phil didn't see them approach. He was having words with one of the foremen.

"What if we do go short in cement, it will be strong enough," the man said.

"Even if it would be strong enough, the company's contract must be followed. We can't afford to violate the contract. Put in 120 more bags of cement in this lot. But I happen to know it won't be strong enough."

"Yeah, a fresh college kid like you, you know a lot."

"I'll tell you why I know and then I'll punch your nose down flat for you," Phil said quietly, "I know because I worked on the Radlet crew that built the east half of the big Mastoda Dam and—"

"Don't hit him," called Maj. Wainright "and say, Sanford, I happen to know old Radlet. I suppose you were numbered like all his men? He even numbered his sons, you know."

"Sure I know, major. I worked with his son My number was 1291 and—"

"Phil—you darling!"

It was Inez She had rushed up to him and was kissing him.

"Hey, you, cut that out in working hours," shouted the major. 'Come up to the house tonight for that sort of thing."

Dear Sympathetic Aunt Bella—

I am constantly annoyed at lunch time by a kittenish old gal, with dyed red hair, too much powder on her face, and a wen on her nose, who comes and sits down at my table in the cafeteria. She keeps kicking me and winking. Yesterday she pinched me. I finally made a date with her for tonight. Shall I break it? HORACE.

A.—I resent the tone of your letter as an insult to all womanhood. I will see that the lady in question never sits at your table again, and I think I will enjoy my lunch just as well as heretofore.

SOOTHING SYRUP

Wealthy people, bored and cranky,
Living in discomfort swanky—
Passing doormen, proud and cold,
In upholstering of gold,
Leading dogs too nice for fleas,
Facing butlers (pants to knees)
All God's children, neatly chosen
To appear with faces frozen,

All the pity, to be sure,
Is bestowed upon the poor,
When, in fact, it would be healthy
To show pity for the wealthy.

Are Women Brainless?

Here Is a Man That Thinks So.

Women are not as bright as they used to be, says G. K. Chesterton, the English essayist, and American women, especially, are losing the power to think. When they worked all day in the kitchen or dairy, ran a spinning wheel in the evening and took care of a dozen children in their spare time, they were mentally superior. But now, when they buy food ready to eat at the delicatessen, get their clothes ready to wear at the shops, and have no children to speak of, their brains are fading.

As if that shot were not enough, the redoubtable Mr. Chesterton then goes on to attack the women who have taken up a business career.

"They," he declares, "are a pitiful sight. The army of stenographers, for instance, really believes that, apart from earning their wages, they are doing something in the world, whereas all the letters and documents written by all the stenographers have added nothing at all to the world's progress."

One might agree with that, but still fail to see that it proved anything, except, perhaps, that men are dumber than women. For the men dictate the letters and documents that add nothing to the world's progress. The women merely copy them.

Christmas Bonuses

Why Wait Until Christmas?

Many firms will give Christmas bonuses to employes this year, as usual. In the aggregate, these sums will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. Why not give them NOW, in ample time to be used for Christmas shopping, instead of waiting until December 24th or 25th?

Employes would be fully as appreciative—in fact, more so. And the money would be a distinct boom for business.

Early shopping is urged at every Christmas. It is a kindness to overworked clerks and salespeople, and is a help to the Postoffice Department, which already is renewing its appeal to the public to mail Christmas parcels promptly.

Early shopping is difficult, however, for those without money to shop.

The bonuses would help many to solve this problem. Business houses can contribute to business revival by making them available now, when they are most needed.

"The Brave Days of Old"

Thank Heaven They Are Gone.

Rafael Sabatini, author of "Captain Blood" and other glamorous and swashbuckling best sellers, thinks the good old days of which he writes were not nearly so good as our own time.

Says Mr. Sabatini:

"The average stenographer, earning $25 a week, is better off than any great lady who lived down to and including the eighteenth century. Just take the single item of silk stockings. Your stenographer takes them quite for granted. But when Queen Elizabeth was presented with her first pair it was so important an event, personally and historically, that there is a full account of it in the chronicles of the time."

So too with a hundred other things Mr. Sabatini does not mention. Forgetting the radio and the airplane and other modern marvels, consider only the bathtub. The grandparents of many of us never saw one. And to hark back 200 years earlier, the Pilgrim Fathers were considered rather eccentric for proclaiming that cleanliness was next to godliness. In those days bathing was akin to heresy.

Now and then we all pine for the golden age or the splendors of the vanished past, and complain that we were born too late. But a week spent in the year 1620, if we could be transported back to that epoch, would speedily cure the most sentimental mourner for the brave—and insanitary—days of old.

Horses

Not Yet Extinct.

Not that it matters, but those who think the horse is an extinct quadruped are wrong. There are probably more today than there were 30 years ago when the auto was in its infancy and the airplane had not been invented.

Census experts will tell you that Indians are more numerous now than when Columbus discovered America. You don't notice them, that's all.

It's the same with the horse.

Personally we are glad of it. Cars and airplanes are faster, we admit. They get you there in a hurry. But you can't jump fences with them or feed them sugar. And they don't whinny when you throw open the door of the garage or hangar.

If they ever learn to do that they may oust the horse.

But not before.

Leap Before You Look

It's Safer.

Dexterity is a valuable trait, and in modern traffic is perhaps essential if you are to live to a ripe old age. It seems to have been so, anyway, in the case of Richard Dix, who saved himself from sudden death in New York recently by leaping on the bumper of a taxi. Mr. Dix clung to the radiator cap until the driver observed his presence. By this time the cab had covered a block and several hundred persons were wondering how soon Mr. Dix would fall off.

A veteran of the films, Mr. Dix has had more training in acrobatics than the average man or woman. The rest of us, however, might get an idea from him, take a course in circus gymnastics and fool the next chauffeur who bears down on us against the red lights.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—For more than a year I have been watching a sidewalk baby-raising experiment with increasing astonishment. It upsets a cartload of hygienic theories and sanitation laws. All the formulas of experts have been thrown into discard.

It is frequently heard New York is no place to rear a child—children need pure air, sunshine and playgrounds. These babies I have watched too ardently are twins. Their parents either work or own a delicatessen on Third avenue. Like Topsy, the youngsters just grow.

Last winter in fair weather and foul the babies were on the pavement in their double carriage. Overhead the serpentine elevated produced the usual clatter. In the press of pedestrianic traffic the infants just cooed and clutched at passersby.

At times they tried to stuff their tiny toes into their mouths. Not once have I ever seen them cry. They were given chunks of bread to chew and they lay goo-gooing at the drunks, the panhandlers and the tottering viragos of the polyglot world of "Thoid avanoo."

The dirt and smoke of the city appear to make their cheeks pinker and their bodies fatter and healthier. There was a day last March when it was misting heavily and as I passed the tots were still in their carriage in serene thumb-sucking slumber.

The other day I passed along again. They are sitting up now and a baby coop supplants the carriage. There they sit playing with a rag doll and a faded paint rubber ball. Cardboard has been placed over an iron grating to keep their playthings from falling through.

All around is the usual tenement street. Underneath them is a cellar filled with junk. Stray cats rub against them and roaming dogs lick their faces. But the cheerful cherubs are undaunted. And they better be taken indoors soon. For many of us are fighting off a kidnapping urge.

John Ringling, the circus man, is one of the most astute business men in the land, which accounts largely for the fact he is one of the richest. Recently a go-getter auto salesman was trying to sell him an automobile. During his high pressure advances he declared: "Why, Mr. Ringling, that car will do anything, absolutely anything!"

A pause and the naive Mr. Ringling inquired softly: "Will it jump sideways?"

Then there was the Ringling clown wanting a raise in salary. He was getting $60 a week and "Mister John," of course, knew it.

"Mr. Ringling," pleaded the clown, "I sure would like to be with your show next year, but I ought to get $20 a week more."

"Twenty dollars a week more!" screamed Ringling. "Heavens, man, you are getting $40 a week now!"

The clown withdrew, hoping the circus man would not find out the real figures. That ended that.

THE AGE OF THE EARTH

By Archibald Henderson

A vast amount of study has been devoted to the problem which has a perennial interest: How long has the earth existed? There is the "geological hour-glass" method, which is particularly interesting for its analogy to sand falling by gravity in an hour-glass. By measuring the amount which has fallen we can tell the fraction of an hour.

The geologist, by measuring the rate of denudation of the earth's surface and the rate at which sedimentation has been going on, can compute the age of the earth. There is one serious drawback to this method. We cannot be at all sure that the rate of denudation has been uniform.

More satisfactory results are derived by employing the more exact methods of physics and astronomy. The rate of disintegration of some element, like urlanium, can be observed. Such a radio-active element, as Einstein observed long ago, is a natural clock of extreme accuracy.

From one age to another there is no appreciable variation whatever in the rate of disintegration. From studies made by Aston and Rutherford at Cambridge, the latter has calculated that the age of the earth cannot exceed 3,400 million years, and probably very much less.

Other studies, on the basis of astronomical evidence, have been made, which give results varying very largely. Studies have been made of the shapes of the orbits of various planets and satellites.

According to the known laws of the rates of change of these orbits, an estimate of the age of the earth can be arrived at.

Jeffreys, from a study of the orbits of Mercury and the moon, has computed that the age of the solar system varies from 1,000 to 10,000 million years, the orbit of the moon giving the result of about 4,000 million years. The entire sum of knowledge, on this subject, until very recently, is embodied in the work of Holmes: "The Age of the Earth."

New computations have recently been made by Prof. Alois F. Kovarik, of the physics department of Yale University. The radio-active element examined by him was uraninite—the particular object of study being a piece of this rock from Sinyaya Pola in Carelia, Northwestern Russia.

A radio-active element, as shown by Sir William Ramsay, for example, is composed of atoms which disintegrate; and in so doing change into atoms of another sort of element.

Thus we have a sort of illustration, here, of the transmutation of elements.

Three sorts of rays are emitted, known as alpha, beta and gamma rays. What is left of the original atom establishes itself in a new arrangement of a new atom, lighter in weight and possessing new chemical properties.

All this is quite well known, as is also, to a very considerable degree of accuracy, the rate at which the radio-active element disintegrates. Amounts of a radio-active element originally and finally present are, obviously, connected by a certain relation or law, which involves the constant rate of disintegration and the elapsed time.

Kovarik has set up a formula, which has given interesting new results. One radio-activity test was announced by Rutherford in 1904, from a study of helium. But the method is open to doubt since in helium, which is a gas, there is a strong probability of leakage.

Another test has been made on biotite and fluorspar. But it is not a particularly accurate method. The third method, the most promising of all, has been developed by the professor of radio-chemistry at Yale, B. B. Boltwood. A modification of Boltwood's method has now been worked out by Kovarik. Specimens of uraninite from South Dakota and Russia give values, respectively, of 1,465,000,000 and 1,852,000,000 for the ages of these two minerals. Other uranium-bearing minerals from Norway give values ranging from 825,000,000 to 986,000,000 years.

Text for Today I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day.—ii. Timothy, i:.12.

What Is True Greatness?

Mere Bigness? No, Indeed.

GIANT EGYPTIAN STATUES, CUT FROM THE LIVING ROCK.

Men are moved by three impulses that control them and push the race forward.

There's the instinct of self-preservation, or fear of death, that keeps us here, worried and working, but clinging desperately to life.

There's love of family, that produces children to take our places.

And, third, there's ambition, the desire to DO SOMETHING, to be "great" that pushes us ahead, and develops progress.

What is real greatness? It is not mere BIGNESS. You are amazed at the size of these gigantic statues, cut from the rock, at the temple of Abu Simbel, in Egypt, on the old Nile River. But, in them, you see only size, nothing great or beautiful.

The Egyptian ruler relied on size to prove how important he was, and to make his glory last forever.

He built huge pyramids, masses of gigantic stones, that amaze human beings even now.

He made statues like those that you see above, and HE is gone and forgotten and his great works are crumbling.

animals, represents another effort to establish greatness, artificially.

This curious creature, seen in the strange eastern country of Ceylon, during the summer festival, is arrayed in as much glory as possible, including trousers, or pantalettes.

He moves slowly through the streets, with a magnificent little golden temple fastened to his back. In that temple sits no ruler, the only burden the elephant carries is a tooth, supposed to have been taken from the jaw of Buddha, founder of the Buddhist religion.

Buddha was a good man, and invented one of the best religions of the many that are on the earth.

The people have forgotten his true goodness, his sympathy for the poor, his renunciation of worldly things.

They have built up another Buddhism, and worship a tooth, bogus, doubtless, supposed to be taken from the jaw of the good man. They carry that through the streets, on the back of a gigantic elephant, and they think that is "greatness." But it isn't.

Greatness is DOING SOMETHING for other human beings, working for others, adding to the total amount of knowledge and happiness in the world.

There is no greatness in merely trying to make yourself seem big.

Alexander the Great planned to make a statue of himself out of a mountain of solid stone. It was to be so big that a city could be built in his outstretched hand.

He never lived to carry out the idea. But if he had built the city, it wouldn't have made him any greater. His greatness was in his own brain.

Greatness is in those that do create, or invent something. Such a man as Newton, Fulton, Lincoln, represent greatness.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You believe the future holds great things in store for you.

There is still time to make the required effort and self denial.

At present you want to enjoy yourself and are averse to taking on responsibilities which will curtail your pleasure or demand too much of your time.

Is this your line of thought?

If so, probably you have followed the course it suggests for years.

But nothing short of a miracle would enable you to carry out the program you have mapped out for your future, if you keep on wasting time getting started.

You are not giving thought to the preparation necessary before you really enter upon the work which is to make your future one of achievement.

Foolishly you think you can apply yourself diligently enough to the task of winning when you desire it, and believe that—presto—you will procure it.

What a shock awaits you when you decide to start work on the big undertaking.

Not having trained yourself for the sort of application necessary, you will find yourself lacking in fundamentals. Consequently the groundwork of your accomplishment will crumble because it needs a foundation, you have not constructed in past years.
